APEGS National Professional Practice Examination (NPPE) Exam Sample Questions (Q154-Q159):

NEW QUESTION # 154

A licensed professional Is employed at engineering firm Company A and Is in the process of preparing a Did on a municipal construction project. The professional has a very close friend who works for competing firm Company B, which is actively bidding on the same project. The friend contacts the professional about an attractive job opportunity at Company B. The friend adds that the job opportunity (contingent on the professional providing detailed information from Company A's bid on the project). In addition, the professional will be granted a "special bonus" for providing this information. Would it be ethical for the professional to accept the offer?

- A. No, it would not be ethical to accept this offer as this would be a clear conflict of interest.
- B. No, it would not be ethical to accept the offer as receiving a future "special bonus" represents a latent conflict of interest.
- C. Yes, it would be ethical to accept the offer as long as the professional rejects the "special bonus."
- D. Yes, it would be ethical to accept the offer as long as the professional abandons the project and resigns in advance.

Answer: A

Explanation:

It would not be ethical for the professional to accept the offer, as this would be a clear conflict of interest (Option A). The proposal involves sharing confidential information from Company A for personal gain, which breaches standard ethical guidelines in professional engineering that mandate loyalty to one's employer and prohibit the misuse of insider information. Such actions could also potentially violate legal statutes regarding confidential corporate information.

NEW QUESTION # 155

Which of the following activities is undertaken by Engineers Canada and Geoscientists Canada?

- A. Development of guidelines for licensure
- B. Appointment of the professional associations' councils
- C. Enforcement of the appropriate provincial/territorial acts
- D. Investigate Interprovincial misconduct by an engineer/geoscientist

Answer: A

Explanation:

Engineers Canada and Geoscientists Canada undertake the development of guidelines for licensure. These national organizations set the standards and guidelines that help regulate the profession across Canada, ensuring that the qualifications and practices of engineers and geoscientists meet consistent, high standards of professionalism and ethical conduct. They do not directly enforce provincial/territorial acts, appoint professional associations' councils, or investigate misconduct; these responsibilities typically fall to individual provincial and territorial regulatory bodies.

NEW QUESTION # 156

Which of the following statements about an environmental site assessment (ESA) is false?

- A. An ESA recommends remedies if environmental contamination is discovered.
- B. An ESA follows the same process as an environmental audit.
- C. An ESA is generally conducted by a group of professionals.
- D. An ESA is usually conducted in accordance with Canadian Standards Association guidelines.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The statement that an environmental site assessment (ESA) follows the same process as an environmental audit is false. While both ESAs and environmental audits assess environmental compliance and issues, an ESA specifically focuses on assessing potential contamination of a site, often as part of property transactions, whereas an environmental audit evaluates compliance with environmental laws and regulations across operations.

NEW QUESTION # 157

One licensee professional should inform another licensed professional when the first is engaged to review work initially performed by the second

- A. as a professional courtesy or when it is mandated
- B. in the interest of public safety

- C. to uphold a duty to the employer and the public
- D. to maintain professional confidentiality or when directed by management

Answer: A

Explanation:

One licensed professional should inform another when engaged to review work initially performed by the latter as a professional courtesy and when it is mandated. This protocol fosters transparency and accountability within the professional community. It ensures that the second professional is aware of the review and can provide necessary information or clarification, thereby upholding the professional standards and integrity of the work. It is also typically required by the professional regulatory body to maintain the standards of practice and ensure that all work is up to the required professional standards.

NEW QUESTION # 158

A senior, licensed professional is asked by their manager to authenticate a final, technical work document prepared by other licensed professional team members. Which of the following statements related to authenticating this document is true?

- A. A final, technical document prepared by licensed professionals does not require authentication.
- B. The senior professional can immediately authenticate the final, technical document without further scrutiny as it was prepared by licensed professionals.
- C. A licensed professional is required to have personally prepared the final, technical document in order to authenticate it.
- D. The senior professional accepts full responsibility for the final, technical document once authenticated.

Answer: D

Explanation:

When a senior, licensed professional is asked to authenticate a final technical work document prepared by other licensed professional team members, the true statement is that the senior professional accepts full responsibility for the final technical document once authenticated (Option D). Authenticating a document implies that the senior professional has sufficiently reviewed the work and ensures its accuracy and compliance with relevant standards and regulations. It does not require the senior professional to have personally prepared the document, but they must ensure its correctness and appropriateness.
