Salesforce Certified Platform App Builder Sample Questions (Q243-Q248):

NEW QUESTION # 243

An app builder is loading data into Salesforce. To link the new records back to the legacy system, a field will be used to track the legacy ID on the Account object. For future data loads this ID will be used when upsetting records. Which two field attributes should be selected? Choose 2 answers

- A. Turn (encrypted)
- B. External ID
- C. Required
- D. Unique

Answer: B,D

Explanation:

The correct answers are C. Unique and D. External ID.

The legacy ID should be stored in a custom field marked as an External ID because Salesforce uses External ID fields to identify records from an outside system and to support update/upsert operations during future data loads. The field should also be marked Unique so each legacy system ID maps to only one Salesforce Account record and avoids duplicate-match problems during upsert. Salesforce documentation defines External ID fields as fields that contain record identifiers from outside Salesforce and can be used to update or upsert records.

A . Required is not necessary for the upsert-matching requirement.

B . Encrypted/Text encrypted is not appropriate because encrypted fields are not used for this legacy-ID matching purpose.

NEW QUESTION # 244

The app builder at AW Computing has been asked to track the number of times a case has been reopened. Which solution should the app builder utilize to help with this request?

- A. Record-triggered flow
- B. Scheduled Triggered flow
- C. Screen Flow
- D. Apex Trigger

Answer: A

Explanation:

The correct answer is C. Record-triggered flow.

To track the number of times a Case is reopened, the app builder can create a record-triggered flow on the Case object that runs when the Case is updated. The flow can check when the Status changes from Closed to an open/reopened status and increment a custom number field such as Number_of_Reopens__c. Salesforce Trailhead explains that record-triggered flows run when records are created, updated, created or updated, or deleted.

Why not Apex Trigger? Apex could work, but the Platform App Builder best answer is the declarative option: Flow before code.
