ASQ Certified Manager of Quality/Organizational Excellence Exam Sample Questions (Q594-Q599):

NEW QUESTION # 594

In order for a self-directed work team to be successful, the individual members must be responsible for

- A. new member training
- B. employee recognition
- C. statistical process control analysis
- D. team management

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 595

The best way to create ownership in a major organizational change is to

- A. plan and implement an employee suggestion system
- B. identify and eliminate barriers to communication throughout the organization
- C. ask top management to prioritize the changes that need to be made
- D. Involve employees in planning for the change

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 596

Which of the following factors should be considered when strategic planning for training is conducted?

- A. Location of classes
- B. Specific training dates
- C. Trainer costs
- D. Customer needs

Answer: D

Explanation:

Detailed Explanation: Strategic planning for training should be driven by customer needs to ensure that the training aligns with organizational goals and improves customer satisfaction. Quality management emphasizes the importance of customer focus, and training should support this by enhancing employees' skills to meet customer expectations. The BoK advises aligning training objectives with strategic goals, particularly customer-oriented ones, to enhance the effectiveness of the training program.

NEW QUESTION # 597

A process engineer has calculated that the purchase of a new $150,000 cutter for machines would enable the assembly area to increase output by 30% or more, without additional resource cost. The purchase would exceed the quality budget for the year but would reduce the total operating cost of the assembly department. If the process engineer, the quality manager, and the manager of the machining department collaborate to decide whether to buy the new cutter, they would be using which of the following type of management styles?

- A. Functional management
- B. Management by objective
- C. Cross-functional management
- D. Total quality management

Answer: C

Explanation:

The scenario described involves collaboration across different functional areas of the organization (process engineering, quality management, and machine department management). This is a hallmark of cross-functional management, where teams from different departments or areas of expertise come together to solve problems and make decisions that impact multiple areas of the business. This approach fosters a broader understanding of organizational challenges and leverages diverse perspectives for more effective decision-making.

References:

* ISO 9001:2015, clauses on leadership (clause 5) and planning (clause 6) support the integration of cross-functional teams to enhance organizational performance and customer satisfaction.

* Cross-functional team dynamics are a common subject in quality management literature, reflecting the importance of collaborative approaches in achieving business objectives.

NEW QUESTION # 598

According to Deming, the main reason that employees receive poor annual performance ratings is:

- A. Unclear expectations by their supervisor
- B. Lack of a self-rating system
- C. Insufficient preparation for the appraisal interview by their supervisor

- D. Lack of employee interest

Answer: A

Explanation:

Detailed Explanation: Deming argued that unclear expectations lead to poor performance ratings because employees are often not provided with clear goals or feedback to guide their work. Quality management emphasizes clear communication and expectations as part of effective performance management. According to the BoK, defining roles and responsibilities is essential for setting employees up for success and ensuring that performance evaluations are fair and constructive.
