Fortinet NSE 5 - FortiNAC-F 7.6 Administrator Sample Questions (Q63-Q68):

NEW QUESTION # 63

Which three communication methods are used by FortiNAC to gather information from and control, infrastructure devices? (Choose three.)

- A. SNMP
- B. FTP
- C. CLI
- D. RADIUS
- E. SMTP

Answer: A,C,D

NEW QUESTION # 64

When creating a device profiling rule, what is an advantage of modeling the endpoint as a device in the inventory view?

- A. The devices will have connection logs.
- B. The devices can be associated with a logged on user.
- C. The device will have historic connection logs
- D. The devices can have scheduled connection status polling.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Modeling the endpoint as a device in the inventory allows FortiNAC-F to retain historical connection data for that device, providing visibility into past connectivity events and behavior over time.

NEW QUESTION # 65

When working with a FortiNAC-F Manager and cluster management, what will occur when a cluster manager recovers from a non-responsive state?

- A. It will perform a health check and be demoted to standby
- B. It will be removed from the cluster and placed in a standalone group
- C. It rejoins the cluster as a worker node
- D. It automatically returns to the manager state

Answer: C

Explanation:

When a cluster manager recovers from a non-responsive state, it does not automatically reclaim the manager role. Instead, it rejoins the cluster as a worker node to ensure cluster stability and avoid split-brain conditions.

NEW QUESTION # 66

While troubleshooting a network connectivity issue, an administrator determines that a device was being automatically provisioned to an incorrect VLAN.

Where would the administrator look to identify when and why FortiNAC-F made the network access change?

- A. The Security Event view
- B. The Reports view
- C. The Port Changes view
- D. The Admin Auditing view

Answer: C

Explanation:

The Port Changes view records provisioning actions performed by FortiNAC-F, including VLAN changes, along with the associated reason and timestamp. This allows the administrator to determine when the network access change occurred and what triggered it.

NEW QUESTION # 67

An administrator wants to build device profiling rules based on network traffic, but the network session view is not populated with any records.

Which two settings can be enabled to gather network session information? (Choose two.)

- A. Network traffic polling on any modeled infrastructure device
- B. Layer 3 polling on the infrastructure devices
- C. Netflow setting on the FortiNAC-F interfaces
- D. Firewall session polling on modeled FortiGate devices

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

In FortiNAC-F, the Network Sessions view provides a real-time and historical log of traffic flows, including source/destination IP addresses, ports, and protocols. This data is essential for building Device Profiling Rules that rely on "Traffic Patterns" or "Network Footprints" to identify devices (e.g., an IP camera communicating with its specific NVR). If the network session view is empty, the system is not receiving the necessary flow or session data from the network infrastructure.

According to the FortiNAC-F Administration Guide, there are two primary methods to populate this view:

NetFlow/sFlow/IPFIX (C): FortiNAC-F can act as a flow collector. By enabling NetFlow settings on the FortiNAC-F service interface (port2/eth1) and configuring your switches or routers to export flow data to the FortiNAC IP, the system can parse these packets and record sessions.

Firewall Session Polling (B): For environments with FortiGate firewalls, FortiNAC-F can proactively poll the FortiGate via the REST API to retrieve its current session table. This is particularly useful as it provides session visibility without requiring the overhead of configuring NetFlow on every access layer switch.
