ServiceNow Certified Application Developer-ServiceNow Sample Questions (Q273-Q278):

NEW QUESTION # 273
In a privately-scoped application, which methods are used for logging messages in server-side scripts? (Choose 2 answers)

- A. gs.error()
- B. gs.info()
- C. gs.logError()

- D. gs.debug()
- E. gs.log()

Answer: B,E

Explanation:
In ServiceNow, the GlideSystem (gs) object provides several methods for logging messages in server-side scripts. In a privately-scoped application, the following methods are commonly used:
A . gs.log(): This method logs a message to the system log (syslog table). It is a general-purpose logging method that allows developers to record informational messages.
E . gs.info(): This method logs informational messages to the system log. It is functionally similar to gs.log() but is specifically intended for informational messages.
The other options are not standard methods provided by the GlideSystem object:
B . gs.error(): This method does not exist in the GlideSystem API.
C . gs.debug(): This method does not exist in the GlideSystem API.
D . gs.logError(): This method does not exist in the GlideSystem API.
For more detailed information, refer to the official ServiceNow documentation on the GlideSystem API.

NEW QUESTION # 274
(Deleting a field from a table caused the field to be removed from multiple tables. What type of field was deleted?)

- A. Reference field
- B. Custom field
- C. Inherited field
- D. Base system field

Answer: C

Explanation:
ServiceNow tables commonly use table extension, where a child table inherits fields from a parent table.
When a field is defined on a parent table, that field is automatically available on all extended child tables.
Because of this inheritance model, deleting a field that originates from the parent table effectively removes it from every table that inherits it, which can appear as "the field was removed from multiple tables." That behavior is characteristic of an inherited field: it is not independently defined on each child table, so it does not exist as separate copies to delete individually. A reference field is simply a field type that points to another table and would not inherently remove itself from multiple tables when deleted. A custom field is typically created on a specific table; deleting it would usually impact only that table (unless that table is a parent and the field is inherited, which is precisely the inherited-field scenario). "Base system field" is not the right explanation for multi-table removal; the key cause is inheritance through table extension.

NEW QUESTION # 275
What syntax is used in a Record Producer script to access values from Record Producer form fields?

- A. producer.variablename
- B. current.field_name
- C. current.variable_name
- D. producer.field_name

Answer: A

Explanation:
The syntax used in a Record Producer script to access values from Record Producer form fields is producer.
variable_name. A Record Producer is a type of catalog item that allows users to create records on any table from the service catalog. A Record Producer script is a server-side script that runs when a Record Producer is submitted, and can be used to set values or perform actions on the generated record. The producer object is a global object that represents the Record Producer form and its variables. The variable_name is the name of the variable defined in the Record Producer. NEW QUESTION # 277
For Application Access, there is a configuration option called "Allow access to this table via web services." Which one of the following statements is true when this option is selected?

- A. The user performing the query via web services must have the correct permissions to access the table's records.
- B. This option restricts access only to SOAP web services but does not apply to REST.
- C. This option restricts the ability to delete records via web services, but records can always be read.
- D. Even when not selected, users with the correct permissions can use web services to access the table's records.

Answer: A

Explanation:
In ServiceNow, the "Allow access to this table via web services" option within the Application Access settings determines whether the table can be accessed through web service protocols, such as REST and SOAP. When this option is selected, it permits the table to be accessible via web services; however, it does not override existing permissions. The user or system making the web service request must still have the appropriate permissions (such as roles and access controls) to perform operations on the table's records.
* Option A: Incorrect. If the "Allow access to this table via web services" option is not selected, the table is not accessible via web services, regardless of user permissions.
* Option B: Correct. Enabling this option allows the table to be accessed via web services, but the user must have the correct permissions to access the table's records.
* Option C: Incorrect. This option applies to all web service protocols, including both SOAP and REST.
* Option D: Incorrect. This option controls overall web service access to the table; specific operations (create, read, update, delete) are governed by user permissions and access controls.
