NEW QUESTION # 64

Which scope item covers the requisitioning of raw materials and goods for production?

- A. Consumable Purchasing (BNX)
- B. Quality Management in Procurement (1FM)
- C. Procurement of Direct Materials (J45)
- D. Requisitioning (18J)

Answer: C

Explanation:

The scope item "Procurement of Direct Materials (J45)" specifically covers the requisitioning of raw materials and goods for production. Here's why this is the correct answer:

* Procurement of Direct Materials (J45): This scope item focuses on the procurement of materials that are directly used in the production process. It includes functionalities such as creating purchase requisitions, managing material requirements planning (MRP), and ensuring timely availability of raw materials for production.

* Requisitioning (18J): The Requisitioning scope item is more generic and covers the creation of purchase requisitions for various purposes, including indirect materials and services. It does not specifically focus on direct materials for production.

* Consumable Purchasing (BNX): This scope item is tailored for purchasing consumable materials, such as office supplies or maintenance materials, which are not directly tied to production processes.

* Quality Management in Procurement (1FM): This scope item deals with quality inspections and assurance in procurement processes but does not address the requisitioning of raw materials for production.
