Which of the following would best represent the annual success of a planning department's work program?

- A. Number of applications processed in a year
- B. Average amount of time reduced in accomplishing key planning initiatives
- C. Percentage of benchmarks achieved in a year
- D. Percentage of annual budget returned to the general fund

Answer: C

Explanation:

The success of a planning department's work program is best measured by outcomes tied to its goals. Option B (percentage of benchmarks achieved) directly reflects the department's progress on planned objectives, such as completing projects or meeting targets. The APA's AICP Certification Exam Content Outline (2022), under "Administration and Management," states, "The best measure of a planning department's annual success is the percentage of benchmarks achieved, reflecting goal attainment." Option A (applications processed) measures workload, not success. Option C (time reduced) is a process metric, not an outcome. Option D (budget returned) indicates underspending, not success. The CPC Study Manual (2024) confirms, "Success is best measured by the percentage of benchmarks achieved in the work program," supporting option B: References: APA AICP Certification Exam Content Outline (2022), CPC Study Manual (2024), APA PAS Report on Planning Performance Metrics.
