VMware vDefend Security for VCF 5.x Administrator Sample Questions (Q14-Q19):

NEW QUESTION # 14

Which three elements define the core structure of a vDefend firewall rule?

(Choose three)

Response:

- A. Services
- B. Storage policy
- C. CPU socket allocation
- D. Source
- E. Destination

Answer: A,D,E

NEW QUESTION # 15

vDefend firewall provides support to VMs connected to which of the following?

- A. VMs connected to Overlay Networks
- B. VMs connected to DvPG Networks
- C. VMs connected to VLAN Networks
- D. All of the above

Answer: D

Explanation:

A massive architectural advantage of the VMware vDefend Distributed Firewall (DFW) is that its enforcement mechanism is entirely decoupled from the underlying network topology. Because the firewall rules are enforced directly at the hypervisor kernel level (specifically at the virtual NIC of the VM) before the traffic even hits the virtual switch, it is completely agnostic to how that traffic is eventually transported.

Therefore, DFW seamlessly supports and protects VMs whether they are connected to modern NSX Geneve Overlay Networks, traditional NSX-backed VLAN Networks, or even standard vSphere Distributed Port Groups (DvPG Networks) that have no routing overlay.

NEW QUESTION # 16

Which of the following is true regarding private IP ranges in NTA?

- A. Private IP ranges are added manually
- B. Private IP ranges are automatically in scope based on RFC1918
- C. Private IP ranges are based on user-defined IP pools
- D. Private IP ranges are automatically in scope based on RFC1918 and manually added

Answer: B

Explanation:

For Network Traffic Analysis (NTA) to effectively analyze threats, it must understand the context of the network—specifically, it needs to differentiate between internal East-West traffic and external North-South traffic. To make deployment seamless, vDefend NTA automatically scopes and defines internal traffic based on the standard RFC 1918 private IP address space (10.0.0.0/8, 172.16.0.0/12, and 192.168.0.0/16). Because these ranges are globally recognized as private, non-routable internet addresses, NTA considers them internal "out-of-the-box" without requiring the administrator to manually input every internal subnet before analysis can begin.

NEW QUESTION # 17

Which one of the following are the ICMP Timer Variables that can be customized within the vDefend Distributed Firewall?

- A. Last Packet, and Static and Dynamic Errors
- B. First Packet, Open, Established, Closing, Fin Wait, and Closed
- C. First Packet, and Error Reply
- D. First Packet, Single, and Multiple

Answer: C

Explanation:

The VMware vDefend Distributed Firewall (DFW) is a stateful firewall, meaning it tracks the state of network connections to automatically allow return traffic. Because different protocols behave differently, vDefend allows administrators to tune the stateful timeout variables based on the protocol.

TCP has complex handshake and teardown states, so its variables are: First Packet, Opening, Established, Closing, FIN Wait, and Closed (Option A).

UDP is connectionless, so its state tracking relies on simple timers: First Packet, Single, and Multiple (Option B).

ICMP (Internet Control Message Protocol), used for ping and diagnostics, is also connectionless and transactional. Therefore, the vDefend DFW tracks its state using only two specific timer variables: First Packet (the initial echo request) and Error Reply (the subsequent echo reply or ICMP error message).

NEW QUESTION # 18

Which interface is primarily used to create and manage firewall rules in VMware vDefend?

Response:

- A. vSphere Web Client
- B. vSAN Health Service
- C. NSX Manager Policy UI
- D. ESXi Host Client

Answer: C
