NEW QUESTION # 859

A 66-year-old female client has smoked 2 packs of cigarettes per day for 20 years. Her arterial blood gases on room air are as follows: pH 7.35; PO<sub>2</sub> 70 mmHg; PCO<sub>2</sub> 55 mmHg; HCO<sub>3</sub> 32 mEq/L. These blood gases reflect:

- A. Compensated metabolic acidosis
- B. Compensated respiratory acidosis
- C. Uncompensated respiratory acidosis
- D. Compensated respiratory alkalosis

Answer: B

Explanation:

(A) In compensated metabolic acidosis, the pH level is normal, the PCO<sub>2</sub> level is decreased, and the HCO<sub>3</sub> level is decreased. The client's primary alteration is an inability to remove excess acid via the kidneys. The lungs compensate by hyperventilating and decreasing PCO<sub>2</sub>. (B) In compensated respiratory acidosis, the pH level is normal, the PCO<sub>2</sub> level is elevated, and the HCO<sub>3</sub> level is elevated. The client's primary alteration is an inability to remove CO<sub>2</sub> from the lungs, so over time, the kidneys increase reabsorption of HCO<sub>3</sub> to buffer the CO<sub>2</sub>. (C) In compensated respiratory alkalosis, the pH level is normal, the PCO<sub>2</sub> level is decreased, and the HCO<sub>3</sub> level is decreased. The client's primary alteration is hyperventilation, which decreases PCO<sub>2</sub>. The client compensates by increasing the excretion of HCO<sub>3</sub> from the body. (D) In uncompensated respiratory acidosis, the pH level is decreased, the PCO<sub>2</sub> level is increased, and the HCO<sub>3</sub> level is normal. The client's primary alteration is an inability to remove CO<sub>2</sub> from the lungs. The kidneys have not compensated by increasing HCO<sub>3</sub> reabsorption.
