- C. show low client motivation.

Which of the following situations describes when a counselor is most likely to use the crisis intervention stress debriefing process?

- A. during an individual session for posttraumatic stress disorder
- B. with a small group shortly after the traumatic incident
- C. in a group session for posttraumatic stress disorder

Answer: B

- A. costs a great deal in terms of time, energy, and resources.
- B. requires multiple researchers.
- C. tends to produce conflicting results.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 145

The characteristic of experimental research that differentiates it from other types of research is

- A. control of the dependent variable.
- B. manipulation of the independent variable.
- C. freedom from sampling bias.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Manipulation of the independent variable is what distinguishes experimental research from non-experimental and quasi-experimental designs. In true experimental research, the researcher deliberately manipulates the independent variable to observe its effect on the dependent variable, allowing for the determination of cause- and-effect relationships.

NEW QUESTION # 146

In using the problem-management approach to helping, the counselor should help the client to

- A. accept personal perceptions of reality.
- B. identify unsolvable problems.
- C. go beyond faulty interpretations.

Answer: C

Explanation:

In the problem-management approach (as described by Gerard Egan), counselors guide clients to move beyond their initial, often faulty, interpretations of their issues. This involves challenging and reframing unhelpful thoughts, broadening perspectives, and facilitating constructive action. "The counselor's role in problem-management is to help the client move beyond faulty interpretations and inaccurate perceptions, enabling them to discover more useful ways of understanding and resolving problems."
