NEW QUESTION # 223

During which of the following system lifecycle stages is it BEST to conduct a privacy impact assessment (PIA) on a system that holds personal data?

- A. Development

- B. Production
- C. Functional testing
- D. User acceptance testing (UAT)

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 224

Which of the following is the BEST way to protect personal data in the custody of a third party?

- A. Include requirements to comply with the organization's privacy policies in the contract.
- B. Have corporate counsel monitor privacy compliance.
- C. Require the third party to provide periodic documentation of its privacy management program.
- D. Add privacy-related controls to the vendor audit plan.

Answer: A

Explanation:

In GDPR parlance, organizations that use third-party service providers are often, but not always, considered data controllers, which are entities that determine the purposes and means of the processing of personal data, which can include directing third parties to process personal data on their behalf. The third parties that process data for data controllers are known as data processors. The best way to protect personal data in the custody of a third party is to include requirements to comply with the organization's privacy policies in the contract. This means that the organization should specify the terms and conditions of data processing, such as the purpose, scope, duration, and security measures, and ensure that they are consistent with the organization's privacy policies and applicable privacy regulations. The contract should also define the roles and responsibilities of both parties, such as data controller and data processor, and establish mechanisms for monitoring, reporting, auditing, and resolving any issues or incidents related to data privacy. NEW QUESTION # 225

Transport Layer Security (TLS) provides data integrity through:

- A. calculation of message digests.
- B. exchange of digital certificates.
- C. asymmetric encryption of data sets.
- D. use of File Transfer Protocol (FTP).

Answer: A

Explanation:

Transport Layer Security (TLS) is a protocol that provides secure communication over the internet by encrypting and authenticating data. TLS provides data integrity through the calculation of message digests, which are cryptographic hashes that summarize the content and structure of a message. The sender and the receiver of a message can compare the message digests to verify that the message has not been altered or corrupted during transmission. TLS also uses digital certificates, asymmetric encryption, and symmetric encryption to provide confidentiality and authentication, but these are not directly related to data integrity.

NEW QUESTION # 226

An organization plans to implement a new cloud-based human resources (HR) solution with a mobile application interface. Which of the following is the BEST control to prevent data leakage?

- A. Download of data to the mobile devices is disabled.
- B. Separate credentials are used for the mobile application.
- C. Data stored in the cloud-based solution is encrypted.
- D. Single sign-on is enabled for the mobile application.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

The best control to prevent data leakage for a cloud-based HR solution with a mobile application interface is to disable the download of data to the mobile devices. This is because downloading data to the mobile devices increases the risk of data loss, theft, or unauthorized access, especially if the devices are lost, stolen, or compromised. Disabling the download of data to the mobile devices ensures that the data remains in the cloud-based solution, where it can be protected by encryption, access control, and other security measures. The other options are not as effective or sufficient as disabling the download of data to the mobile devices, as they do not address the root cause of the data leakage risk, which is the exposure of data outside the cloud-based solution.

NEW QUESTION # 227

Which of the following is the MOST important consideration for developing data retention requirements?

- A. Cost-benefit analysis
- B. Industry guidelines
- C. Data classification rules
- D. Applicable regulations

Answer: D

Explanation:

The most important consideration for developing data retention requirements is the applicable regulations that govern the data. Different types of data may be subject to different legal and regulatory obligations, such as how long the data must be kept, how it must be protected, and how it can be accessed or disposed of. Failing to comply with these obligations can result in fines, penalties, lawsuits, or reputational damage for the organization. Therefore, it is essential to identify and follow the applicable regulations for each data category.
