NEW QUESTION # 57

A company is launching a proof-of-concept, cloud-based application. One of the requirements is to select a database engine that will allow administrators to perform quick and simple queries on unstructured dat a. Which of the following would be best suited for this task?

- A. MonogoDB
- B. Oracle
- C. MS SQL
- D. Graph database

Answer: A

Explanation:

The best suited database engine for this task is MongoDB. MongoDB is a type of non-relational database that stores data as documents in JSON-like format. MongoDB allows administrators to perform quick and simple queries on unstructured data, such as text, images, videos, or social media posts, without requiring a predefined schema or complex joins. MongoDB also supports cloud-based deployment, scalability, and high availability. The other options are either relational databases that require a fixed schema and structure for data, or specialized databases that are designed for specific purposes, such as graph databases for storing and analyzing network data. NEW QUESTION # 58

Which of the following cloud delivery models provides users with the highest level of flexibility regarding resource provisioning and administration?

- A. IaaS
- B. DBaaS
- C. PaaS
- D. SaaS

Answer: A

Explanation:

The cloud delivery model that provides users with the highest level of flexibility regarding resource provisioning and administration is IaaS. IaaS, or Infrastructure as a Service, is a cloud delivery model that provides users with access to virtualized computing resources, such as servers, storage, network, and operating systems, over the internet. Users can provision, configure, and manage these resources according to their needs and preferences, without having to worry about the maintenance or security of the physical infrastructure. IaaS offers users the most control and customization over their cloud environment, as well as the ability to scale up or down as needed. The other options are either different cloud delivery models or not related to cloud computing at all. For example, DBaaS, or Database as a Service, is a cloud delivery model that provides users with access to database management systems and tools over the internet; SaaS, or Software as a Service, is a cloud delivery model that provides users with access to software applications and services over the internet; PaaS, or Platform as a Service, is a cloud delivery model that provides users with access to development platforms and tools over the internet. Reference: CompTIA DataSys+ Course Outline, Domain 2.0 Database Deployment, Objective 2.1 Given a scenario, select an appropriate database deployment method.

NEW QUESTION # 59

Which of the following types of RAID, if configured with the same number and type of disks, would provide the best write performance?

- A. RAID 6
- B. RAID 5
- C. RAID 10
- D. RAID 3

Answer: C

Explanation:

The type of RAID that would provide the best write performance if configured with the same number and type of disks is RAID 10. RAID 10, or RAID 1+0, is a type of RAID that combines mirroring and striping techniques to provide both redundancy and performance. Mirroring means that data is duplicated across two or more disks to provide fault tolerance and data protection. Striping means that data is split into blocks and distributed across two or more disks to provide faster access and throughput. RAID 10 requires at least four disks and can tolerate the failure of up to half of the disks without losing data. RAID 10 provides the best write performance among the RAID types because it can write data in parallel to multiple disks without parity calculations or overhead. The other options are either different types of RAID or not related to RAID at all. For example, RAID 3 is a type of RAID that uses striping with a dedicated parity disk to provide redundancy and performance; RAID 5 is a type of RAID that uses striping with distributed parity to provide redundancy and performance; RAID 6 is a type of RAID that uses striping with double distributed parity to provide extra redundancy and performance.

NEW QUESTION # 60

A database administrator should review the database disaster recovery documentation:

- A. during every first week of every month.
- B. just before an outside audit is scheduled.
- C. whenever a new Chief Technical Officer joins the company.
- D. when the company's business requirements change.

Answer: D

Explanation:
Disaster recovery documentation should be reviewed and updated whenever business requirements change to ensure recovery plans remain aligned with current needs.

NEW QUESTION # 61

A database administrator is concerned about transactions in case the system fails. Which of the following properties addresses this concern?

- A. Isolation
- B. Atomicity
- C. Consistency
- D. Durability

Answer: D

Explanation:
The property that addresses this concern is durability. Durability is one of the four properties (ACID) that ensure reliable transactions in a database system. Durability means that once a transaction has been committed, its effects are permanent and will not be lost in case of system failure, power outage, crash, etc. Durability can be achieved by using techniques such as write-ahead logging, checkpoints, backup and recovery, etc. The other options are either not related or not specific to this concern. For example, isolation means that concurrent transactions do not interfere with each other and produce consistent results; atomicity means that a transaction is either executed as a whole or not at all; consistency means that a transaction preserves the validity and integrity of the data.
