ASIS Physical Security Professional Exam Sample Questions (Q101-Q106):

NEW QUESTION # 101

Which of the following is best for reducing the number of nuisance alarms?

- A. Conducting frequent door inspections and promptly replacing faulty components
- B. Placing signage on the inside of doors
- C. Examining janitorial programs and ensuring that cleaning is done only during the day

- D. Having security guards patrol after hours

Answer: A

Explanation:

Nuisance alarms, particularly from doors, are often caused by mechanical failures such as worn hinges, faulty magnetic switches, or misaligned contacts. Regular inspections and maintenance are the most effective way to reduce false alarms.

Signage (A) helps inform but doesn't fix the mechanical issue.

Patrols (C) are reactive, not preventative.

Janitorial scheduling (D) can reduce traffic but doesn't address faulty hardware.

NEW QUESTION # 102

Private security functions are not essentially client orientated; public law enforcement functions are society or community oriented.

- A. False
- B. True

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 103

Which of the following is NOT the category of contingency planning program?

- A. those that impact the business infrastructure
- B. those that impact the people
- C. those that impact the processes
- D. those that impact the reputation of the business

Answer: D

Explanation:

Contingency planning traditionally focuses on:

Infrastructure (A)

People (B)

Processes (C)

While reputation is a concern in broader risk management and public relations, it is not considered a direct category of contingency planning programs, which deal more with operational continuity than brand management.

NEW QUESTION # 104

Electromechanical and electromagnetic locks are considered fail-safe if they:

- A. Can be deactivated remotely by the fire alarm system
- B. Remain locked when the power is removed
- C. Resist tampering
- D. Remain unlocked when the power is removed

Answer: D

Explanation:

Fail-safe locks are designed to unlock automatically when power is removed. This ensures people can exit during emergencies such as fire alarms or power outages. It is a critical safety requirement in most building codes.

A may be true for integrated systems but doesn't define fail-safe.

B describes fail-secure, which keeps the door locked during power failure.

D (Tamper resistance) relates to durability, not fail-safe function.

NEW QUESTION # 105

Which of the following BEST describes the operation of a passive infrared sensor?

- A. Detecting infrared radiation and analyzing the reflection data
- B. Detecting moving infrared radiation against the radiation environment of the room
- C. Transmitting infrared radiation into the environment of the room and detecting the changes
- D. Transmitting and receiving infrared radiation, then detecting any changes in signals

Answer: B

Explanation:

Passive Infrared (PIR) sensors operate by detecting changes in infrared radiation (heat) levels in a given area.

They do not emit any energy but instead sense the movement of heat signatures (typically from people) across a background that has a stable infrared profile. When a warm object moves in front of the sensor, it registers a change and triggers an alert.

B and C describe active sensors (e.g., microwave or ultrasonic).

D refers to analyzing reflected infrared, which is not how PIR sensors function.
