- A. To acquire authorization to send emails to mobile devices
- B. To prevent unauthorized emails to mobile devices
- C. To access a current list of wireless domain names
- D. To ensure their emails are sent to actual wireless subscribers

Answer: B

Explanation:

The Wireless Domain Registry is a list of domain names that are used to transmit electronic messages to wireless devices, such as cell phones and pagers. The purpose of the registry is to protect wireless consumers from unwanted commercial electronic mail messages, by identifying the domain names for those who send such messages. Marketers are required to use the registry to avoid sending unsolicited emails to wireless devices, which may incur costs or inconvenience for the recipients. Sending such emails without the express prior authorization of the recipient is a violation of the CAN-SPAM Act of 2003. References: <https://www.fcc.gov/cgb/policy/domain-name-input>

SCENARIO -

Please use the following to answer the next question:

Miraculous Healthcare is a large medical practice with multiple locations in California and Nevada. Miraculous normally treats patients in person, but has recently decided to start offering telehealth appointments, where patients can have virtual appointments with on-site doctors via a phone app.

For this new initiative, Miraculous is considering a product built by MedApps, a company that makes quality telehealth apps for healthcare practices and licenses them to be used with the practices' branding. MedApps provides technical support for the app, which it hosts in the cloud. Riya is currently reviewing the suitability of the MedApps app from a privacy perspective.

Riya has also been asked by the Miraculous Healthcare business operations team to review the MedApps' optional benchmarking service. Of particular concern is the requirement that Miraculous Healthcare upload information about the appointments to a portal hosted by MedApps.
