CompTIA Data+ Exam (2025) Sample Questions (Q87-Q92):

NEW QUESTION # 87

Which of the following elements is the most important to include in a dashboard for internal technical audiences?

- A. Dynamic features
- B. Company branding
- C. Methodology section
- D. Key performance indicators

Answer: D

Explanation:

This question pertains to the Visualization and Reporting domain, focusing on dashboard design for specific audiences. Internal technical audiences (e.g., data analysts, IT staff) need actionable, data-driven insights.

* Methodology section (Option A): Methodology is important for research reports, not dashboards, especially for technical audiences who prioritize data.

* Dynamic features (Option B): Dynamic features (e.g., interactivity) are useful but not the most critical element for technical audiences.

* Key performance indicators (Option C): KPIs provide critical metrics (e.g., system uptime, error rates) that technical audiences need to monitor and act on, making this the most important element.

* Company branding (Option D): Branding is more relevant for external audiences, not internal technical ones.

The DA0-002 Visualization and Reporting domain emphasizes "translating business requirements to form the appropriate visualization," and KPIs are essential for technical dashboards.

NEW QUESTION # 88

Which of the following data repositories stores unformatted data in its original, raw form?

- A. Data mart
- B. Data silo
- C. Data warehouse
- D. Data lake

Answer: D

Explanation:

This question pertains to the Data Concepts and Environments domain, focusing on data repositories. The task is to identify a repository that stores raw, unformatted data.

* Data warehouse (Option A): A data warehouse stores structured, processed data in a predefined schema, not raw data.

* Data silo (Option B): A data silo is an isolated repository, often structured, not designed for raw data storage.

* Data mart (Option C): A data mart is a subset of a data warehouse, also storing structured data.

* Data lake (Option D): A data lake stores raw, unformatted data in its original format (structured, semi-structured, or unstructured), making it the correct choice.

The DA0-002 Data Concepts and Environments domain includes understanding "different types of databases and data repositories," and a data lake is designed for raw data storage.

NEW QUESTION # 89

A recent server migration applied an update to dataset naming conventions. Multiple users are now reporting stale information in an existing dashboard. The date in the dataset confirms a successful data refresh. Which of the following should a data analyst do first?

- A. Confirm the dashboard is pointed to the newest dataset.
- B. Filter the data in the dashboard.
- C. Verify that the dashboard subscription is not expired.
- D. Escalate user permissions on the server.

Answer: A

Explanation:

This question falls under the Data Governance domain, focusing on troubleshooting data freshness issues in dashboards. The dashboard shows stale data despite a successful refresh, and the server migration updated naming conventions, suggesting a potential mismatch.

* Confirm the dashboard is pointed to the newest dataset (Option A): The server migration updated dataset naming conventions, so the dashboard might still be pointing to an old dataset name, causing stale data. Confirming the dataset connection is the first step.

* Filter the data in the dashboard (Option B): Filtering might adjust the view but doesn't address the root cause of stale data.

* Escalate user permissions on the server (Option C): Permissions issues would likely prevent access, not cause stale data, especially since the dataset refreshed successfully.

* Verify that the dashboard subscription is not expired (Option D): An expired subscription might prevent access, but the dashboard is accessible, just showing stale data.

The DA0-002 Data Governance domain includes "data quality control concepts," such as ensuring dashboards connect to the correct, updated datasets after changes like server migrations.

NEW QUESTION # 90

Which of the following supports capabilities such as automatic versioning, corruption checks, KPIs, and user authentication?

- A. Notebook
- B. REST API
- C. Pipeline
- D. Source control

Answer: D

Explanation:

This question falls under the Data Governance domain, focusing on tools that support data management and quality control features. The task is to identify a tool with capabilities like versioning, corruption checks, KPIs, and authentication.

* Notebook (Option A): Notebooks (e.g., Jupyter) are for data analysis and coding but don't inherently support versioning, corruption checks, or authentication.

* REST API (Option B): REST APIs enable data access but don't provide versioning or corruption checks as a primary function.

* Pipeline (Option C): Data pipelines automate data workflows but don't typically include versioning or authentication.

* Source control (Option D): Source control systems (e.g., Git) support automatic versioning (tracking changes), corruption checks (integrity verification), KPIs (e.g., commit frequency), and user authentication (access control), making this the best fit.

The DA0-002 Data Governance domain includes "data quality control concepts," and source control systems provide the listed capabilities to ensure data integrity and security.

NEW QUESTION # 91

A company gives users adequate data access permissions to allow them to fulfill their duties but nothing more. Which of the following concepts best describes this practice?

- A. Least privilege
- B. Active Directory
- C. Zero Trust
- D. Hierarchical access

Answer: A

Explanation:

This question pertains to the Data Governance domain, focusing on data security and access control principles. The company restricts access to the minimum needed for duties, which aligns with a specific security concept.

* Active Directory (Option A): Active Directory is a tool for managing users and permissions, not a concept.

* Hierarchical access (Option B): Hierarchical access implies access based on roles in a hierarchy, but it doesn't specifically focus on minimal access.

* Zero Trust (Option C): Zero Trust requires continuous verification for all access, which is broader than just minimal permissions.

* Least privilege (Option D): Least privilege ensures users have only the permissions necessary for their duties, which matches the scenario.

The DA0-002 Data Governance domain includes "data privacy concepts," and least privilege is a fundamental principle for secure access control.
