CWNP Certified Wireless Design Professional Sample Questions (Q150-Q155):

NEW QUESTION # 150

What document can be useful when determining client capabilities in a WLAN design project?

- A. Specifications sheet
- B. Bill of Materials
- C. Purchase receipt
- D. Certificate of ownership

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 151

Excessive uplink RTP frame retransmissions can result in _____.

- A. MOS scores in excess of 5
- B. Deauthentication of the transmitter by the receiver
- C. Head-of-Line blocking at the receiver
- D. Lowering of the data transmission rate by the transmitting station

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 152

You are tasked with designing the WLAN to accommodate certain high density areas on your university campus where users frequently come and go. With a limited DHCP pool size (subnet mask = 255.255.252.0) for this WLAN subnet, you want to ensure that your DHCP addresses are used efficiently and are not exhausted, which would prevent new client Layer 3 connections. The DHCP server is a Windows Server 2012 R2 machine.

Your design task is to determine the best configuration to allow as many users as possible while avoiding WLAN service interruptions and also to use the available addresses as efficiently as possible.

What setting would be most effective at achieving this design task?

- A. Set the maximum client limit per radio to 64
- B. Set the DHCP lease for this pool to 20 minutes
- C. Set the RTS threshold to 2346 bytes
- D. Set the inactive wireless client timeout (client age-out) to 5 minutes

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 153

What is the primary reason for avoiding 160 MHz channels with 802.11 in the 5 GHz band?

- A. No APs exist in production that can implement 160 MHz channels
- B. The data rate becomes too high, which causes some clients to gain access to the medium and never let it go
- C. The output power required for 160 MHz channels is more than most regulatory domains allow
- D. Only two or three 160 MHz channels exist in the current frequency allocation; in some regulatory domains, only one exists

Answer: D

Explanation:

160 MHz channels consume a large portion of the available spectrum. Due to DFS and regulatory limitations, very few 160 MHz-wide channels are available in the 5 GHz band. This makes them impractical for most enterprise environments where avoiding interference and ensuring channel reuse are critical.

From CWDP-305:

"Due to the limited number of non-overlapping 160 MHz channels in the 5 GHz band-and DFS limitations- these channels are difficult to deploy in enterprise WLANs. This limits their usefulness in dense environments."

NEW QUESTION # 154

You performed a site survey with two USB Wi-Fi adapters using a special driver written for the site survey software. After deployment, you realized that the client devices used by your customer are getting lower RSSI values than that shown during your site survey. What is the most likely reason for this result?

- A. USB Wi-Fi adapters have a greater sensitivity than internal Wi-Fi adapters.
- B. The transmit power on the APs is higher than needed.
- C. USB Wi-Fi adapters designed for site surveys may have better sensitivity than regular Wi-Fi cards installed in client devices.
- D. Regular Wi-Fi cards installed in client devices do not support the same protocols as survey adapters.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Site survey adapters are often specialized devices with enhanced sensitivity and performance characteristics compared to standard client Wi-Fi adapters. These specialized adapters can detect weaker signals and provide more detailed RF information, leading to higher RSSI readings during surveys. Consequently, standard client devices may experience lower RSSI values in the same environment.

The CWDP-305 Official Study and Reference Guide notes: MetaGeek Community

"Survey adapters are typically more sensitive than standard client devices, which can result in discrepancies between survey data and actual client experiences." Reference: CWDP-305 Official Study and Reference Guide, Chapter on Post-Design Validation and Troubleshooting
