NEW QUESTION # 33

To improve usability and reduce errors, you have set a default negotiation template for each document type when creating or editing a negotiation style.

This feature is always enabled but you do not always see the template that was set on the negotiation style defaulting in. What could be two reasons for this?

- A. It is a public template.
- B. It is a private template where only the template owner can use it.
- C. It is a global template and the negotiation is created in the same BU as the template.
- D. The template is active at the time of creating the negotiation.
- E. The template is inactive at the time of creating the negotiation.

Answer: B,E

Explanation:

The default negotiation template for each document type is only applied when creating or editing a negotiation style if the template is active and public. If the template is inactive or private, the template will not be defaulted in. Therefore, the two reasons why you do not always see the template that was set on the negotiation style defaulting in are:

* The template is inactive at the time of creating the negotiation. An inactive template cannot be used for creating or editing negotiations, and it will not be displayed in the list of available templates. You need to activate the template before you can use it as a default template.

* It is a private template where only the template owner can use it. A private template is only visible and accessible to the user who created it, and it will not be shared with other users. You need to make the template public if you want to use it as a default template for all users.

* Create a Negotiation Template, section "Create a Negotiation Template", subsection "Default Negotiation Template".

* Oracle Supplier Negotiations, section "Create Negotiations", subsection "Create Negotiations: Default Negotiation Template".
