SAP Certified Associate - Database Administrator - SAP HANA Sample Questions (Q65-Q70):

NEW QUESTION # 65

Which tools can you use to disable tenant database functionalities? Note: There are 2 correct answers to this question.

- A. hdbuserstore
- B. resident hdblcsm
- C. Manage Database Configuration
- D. Manage Restricted Features

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

To disable tenant database functionalities, you can use:

* Manage Database Configuration: This tool in the SAP HANA Cockpit allows administrators to configure and manage database settings, including the disabling of specific functionalities within a tenant database.

* Manage Restricted Features: Specifically designed to control the availability of certain features within tenant databases, this tool provides a straightforward interface for enabling or disabling functionalities deemed sensitive or unnecessary.

References=These tools are part of the administrative capabilities provided by SAP HANA Cockpit, as documented in SAP HANA administration guides and help portals.

Database Administration

NEW QUESTION # 66

You want to change a standard user account into a restricted user account. Which attributes do you need to adjust?

Note: There are 3 correct answers to this question.

- A. Authorization method must be set to "LDAP".
- B. User Group must be set to "Restricted".
- C. Disable ODBC/JDBC Access must be set to "Yes".
- D. PUBLIC role must be set to "No".
- E. Creation of Objects in Own Schema must be set to "No".

Answer: C,D,E

Explanation:

Changing a standard user account to a restricted user account in SAP HANA involves modifying specific attributes to limit the user's capabilities and access within the database:

* Disable ODBC/JDBC Access must be set to "Yes" (A): This prevents the user from connecting to the database using ODBC or JDBC, which are common connectivity methods for external applications and development environments.

* Creation of Objects in Own Schema must be set to "No" (C): Restricted users should not have the privilege to create new objects in their schema, ensuring that their activities are limited to predefined tasks and roles.

* PUBLIC role must be set to "No" (E): Removing the PUBLIC role restricts the user from inheriting any privileges that are generally available to all database users, further limiting their access and capabilities. The options related to Authorization method being set to "LDAP" (B) and User Group must be set to "Restricted" (D) are not directly related to changing the user account type in SAP HANA but pertain to different aspects of user authentication and group categorization.

References= The conversion between standard and restricted user types is detailed in the SAP HANA security and user administration documentation, highlighting the attribute adjustments necessary for enforcing stricter access controls.

User Management

NEW QUESTION # 67

What options do you have when deploying an SAP HANA Cloud, SAP HANA database with an integrated data lake? Note: There are 2 correct answers to this question.

- A. Create an SAP HANA Cloud database and later add a data lake.
- B. Create an SAP HANA Cloud database and include a data lake in one step.
- C. Create an SAP HANA Cloud database with a separate data lake.
- D. Create an SAP HANA Cloud database with the data lake on premise.

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

When deploying an SAP HANA Cloud, SAP HANA database with an integrated data lake, the following options are available:

- * Create an SAP HANA Cloud database with a separate data lake: This option allows you to set up an SAP HANA database and a data lake as two distinct but integrated components.
- * Create an SAP HANA Cloud database and later add a data lake: You can start with just the database and subsequently integrate a data lake, providing flexibility in deployment timing and resource allocation.

References=The provisioning options for integrating a data lake with an SAP HANA Cloud database are discussed in SAP HANA Cloud provisioning guides, detailing how these components can be configured either simultaneously or sequentially.
