NEW QUESTION # 581

How is a telemetry session established for data analytics?

- A. A router initiates a session using the dial-out mode to a destination.
- B. The destination Initiates a session using the dial-out mode to the router.
- C. A router requests the data using Telnet.
- D. A destination initiates a session to a router.

Answer: A

Explanation:

In a dial-out mode, the router dials out to the receiver. This is the default mode of operation. The router acts as a client and receiver acts as a server. In this mode, sensor-paths and destinations are configured and bound together into one or more subscriptions. The router continually attempts to establish a session with each destination in the subscription, and streams data to the receiver. The dial-out mode of subscriptions is persistent. When a session terminates, the router continually attempts to re-establish a new session with the receiver every 30 seconds.

NEW QUESTION # 582

Which programmable API allows the service provider to plan and optimize the automation of network operations and achieve closed-loop operations?

- A. Evolved Programmable Network Manager
- B. Network Services Orchestrator
- C. WAN Automation Engine
- D. Crosswork Network Automation

Answer: B

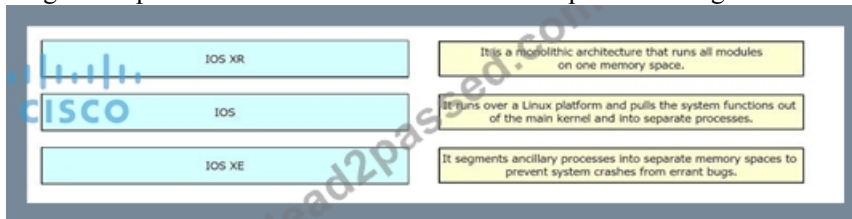

Explanation:

The Network Services Orchestrator (NSO) is designed to allow service providers to automate network operations efficiently. It provides a single, well-defined API that enables integration across various network environments. NSO's capabilities include zero-touch telemetry, machine learning intuition, open APIs, and automated actions, which facilitate a simpler and more efficient network operation experience. This makes it an ideal choice for service providers looking to plan, optimize, and achieve closed-loop operations within their networks.
