- A. Incident response policy

- B. Service level agreement
- C. Access controls
- D. Communication plans

Answer: B

A service level agreement (SLA) is a contract between a cloud service provider (CSP) and a customer that defines the level of service, performance, availability, and responsibilities of both parties<sup>1</sup>. An SLA may also include the notification process a CSP follows after discovering a breach of customer data, such as the time frame, the communication channels, the content and format of the notification, and the remediation actions<sup>2</sup>. A communication plan is a document that outlines the objectives, strategies, and tactics for communicating with different stakeholders, but it may not specify the details of the breach notification process<sup>3</sup>. An incident response policy is a set of guidelines and procedures for responding to security incidents, such as identifying, containing, analyzing, and recovering from them, but it may not be shared with the customer by the CSP<sup>4</sup>. Containers share the host OS's kernel, which reduces overhead and improves efficiency compared to traditional virtual machines. This abstraction enables more efficient use of resources, including storage, and allows for faster, more scalable application deployment.
