NEW QUESTION # 54

While training a UiPath Communications Mining model, the Search feature was used to pin a certain label on a few communications. After retraining, the new model version starts to predict the tagged label but infrequently and with low confidence. According to best practices, what would be the correct next step to improve the model's predictions for the label, in the "Explore" phase of training?

- A. Use the "Search" feature to pin the label to more communications.
- B. Use the "Teach" training mode to pin the label to more communications.
- C. Use the "Low confidence" training mode to pin the label to more communications.
- D. Use the "Rebalance" training mode to pin the label to more communications.

Answer: B

Explanation:

According to the UiPath documentation, the 'Teach' training mode is used to improve the model's predictions for a specific label by pinning it to more communications that match the label's criteria. This helps the model learn from more examples and increase its confidence and accuracy. The 'Teach' mode also allows you to unpin the label from communications that do not match it, which helps the model avoid false positives. The other training modes are not as effective for this purpose, as they either focus on different aspects of the model performance or do not provide enough feedback to the model.
