NEW QUESTION # 48

What two things happen with the Cart during tax implementation?

- A. Previous entries are deleted from the Cart
- B. Previous entries are copied to another object
- C. New entries are written to the Cart
- D. New entries are written to the Order Summary

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

Two things that happen with the cart during tax implementation are that new entries are written to the cart and previous entries are deleted from the cart. A tax implementation is an integration that calculates and applies tax rates and amounts to a cart or an order based on various factors, such as product type, price, quantity, location, and tax rules. A tax implementation can use either an external tax service provider or custom Apex code to perform the tax calculation. When a tax implementation is invoked for a cart, it writes new entries to the cart with a type of Charge and a charge type of Tax. These entries represent the tax amounts and adjustments that are applied to the cart. Before writing new entries to the cart, the tax implementation deletes any existing entries with a type of Charge and a charge type of Tax from the cart. This ensures that the tax calculation is accurate and up-to-date based on the current state of the cart and avoids any conflicts or inconsistencies with previous tax entries. Previous entries are not copied to another object or modified with the new tax calculation, as these are not valid actions for handling existing tax entries. ### NEW QUESTION # 49

What is the fastest route to establishing the data needed for checkout development when setting up a new Store?

- A. Import the data with data loader
- B. Import a previously exported store archive
- C. Select Add Sample Data when setting up the store
- D. Use sfdx setup scripts

Answer: D

Explanation:

Option B is the correct answer because it describes the fastest route to establishing the data needed for checkout development when setting up a new store. The developer can use sfdx setup scripts to deploy a Lightning B2B testing environment that includes checkout flows, sample products, and a buyer. This way, the developer can quickly and easily test and customize the checkout flow using Experience Builder or Flow Builder. The other options are incorrect because they either require more time, manual steps, or additional tools to set up the data for checkout development. For example, importing a previously exported store archive or using data loader would require the developer to have access to the source data and the target org, and to map the fields and objects correctly. Selecting Add Sample Data when setting up the store would only provide a limited amount of data that may not be sufficient for checkout development. NEW QUESTION # 50

Which two aspects are applicable to Page Includes? (2 answers)

- A. Page Includes must be assigned to an OOTB Page, i.e. Home, Product Detail, etc., and enabled
- B. Standard Visualforce controls such as apex:form should not be used within a page include
- C. Page Includes can be configured as Body Includes Begin
- D. If a controller is used for an included page, then a merge variable must be present on the page.

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

Explanation

Two aspects that are applicable to Page Includes are:

* Standard Visualforce controls such as apex:form should not be used within a page include. This is because the page include is rendered inside an existing Visualforce page that already has a form element. Using another form element inside the page include will cause conflicts and errors. Instead, the page include should use HTML elements or custom components that do not require a form element.

* Page Includes can be configured as Body Includes Begin. This means that the page include will be rendered at the beginning of the body section of the page, before any other content or widgets. This can be useful for adding some custom content or functionality that applies to the whole page, such as a banner, a modal, or a script.
