- D. Only upper company management can be fined.

Answer: B

When safety violations are deemed willful, meaning the employer or a supervisory employee intentionally disregarded or was plainly indifferent to safety regulations, the consequences can be severe. Superintendents and crew leaders, as supervisory personnel with responsibility for job site safety, can be held financially and criminally liable (D) for such violations, in addition to potential penalties for the company itself. Negligent workers (A) may face disciplinary actions but are not typically fined by regulatory bodies. Upper management (B) can also be held liable, and employers are indeed liable for employee injuries or deaths resulting from safety violations (C). (OSHA Act of 1970; Fundamentals of Crew Leadership, Fourth Edition, NCCER, Section 3.3.2 Consequences of Violations)

- D. recording an OSHA inspection visit

Answer: B

Explanation:

While the daily diary is crucial for documenting work progress (A), recording important events like OSHA inspections (B), and potentially noting training activities, a potentially important use not directly related to efficient daily management is that it can serve as a source of information during litigation with the client (D) by providing a detailed record of site conditions, work performed, and any relevant incidents. Scheduling a new-worker orientation (C) is more of a planning task than a daily record. (Fundamentals of Crew Leadership, Fourth Edition, NCCER, Section 2.2.3 Maintaining a Daily Log)
