NEW QUESTION # 58

A team member has written a full user guide about a feature that has not yet been developed. Shortly before delivery is to start, the feature is dropped. What did the team member forget to value highly?

- A. Detailed processes
- B. Working solutions
- C. Following the plan
- D. Fixed iterations

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 59

As part of the initial discussions, the team agrees that the "I" in the INVEST criteria for ensuring quality in user stories represents:

- A. Impact - the interdependence of one story on another is specified
- B. Independent - a feature that can be delivered independent of other features
- C. Iteration it will be picked up is specified
- D. Information - all required attributes about the story are identified

Answer: B

Explanation:

The INVEST acronym (Independent, Negotiable, Valuable, Estimable, Small, Testable) is a standard used to evaluate the quality of user stories. The "I" specifically stands for Independent, meaning that a story should be self-contained and free from strict dependencies on other stories. Independence is vital in agile analysis because it allows the Product Owner to re-prioritize the backlog without triggering a cascade of planning changes. When stories are independent, the delivery team can work on them in any order that maximizes value, facilitating a more flexible and responsive delivery process. Reducing dependencies minimizes the risk of bottlenecks and allows for the incremental release of features, ensuring that each story represents a distinct unit of business value that can be validated and deployed on its own merits.
