Appian Associate Developer Sample Questions (Q75-Q80):

NEW QUESTION # 75

A business has large amounts of process data that is difficult for humans to analyze. What is the best Appian feature to help this business gain insights on the data?

- A. Process Mining
- B. RPA
- C. Process Modeler

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 76

You received a support ticket where the user claims that nothing happens when they click the button to complete a task. You confirm that the user is assigned to the task.

What is a possible reason for this problem?

- A. The user was not in the user group configured for the process model security.
- B. The button was not configured to submit the form.
- C. The process report that drives the runtime database does not have security set properly.

Answer: B

Explanation:

If a user claims that nothing happens when they click a button to complete a task, a possible reason could be that the button was not configured to submit the form. This configuration is essential for triggering the form submission action, which in turn can complete the task or initiate further processes. Without this setup, clicking the button will not result in any action.

NEW QUESTION # 77

You are running a process instance and an error occurs on an unattended node.

What happens to your process when this error occurs?

- A. * The process is not paused.
 - * Parallel paths in the process continue to proceed.
 - * An alert is sent to the appropriate recipients (usually admins).
 - * These nodes are not included in the num_problem_tasks process metric in process reports.
- B. * The process is paused.
 - * Parallel paths in the process are stopped.
 - * An alert is sent to the process initiator.
 - * These nodes are included in the num_problem_tasks process metric in process reports.
- C. * The process is paused.

- * Parallel paths in the process are stopped.
- * No alerts are sent.
- * These nodes are included in the `num_problem_tasks` process metric in process reports.

Answer: A

Explanation:

When an error occurs on an unattended node in a running process instance:

The process is not paused, allowing other parallel paths to continue.

An alert is typically sent to appropriate recipients, such as administrators, to notify them of the issue.

These nodes are not counted in the `num_problem_tasks` process metric, which is used in process reports to track problematic tasks. This behavior ensures that the rest of the process can continue as intended while alerting administrators to intervene and address the error.
