NEW QUESTION # 44

Refer to the exhibit. A user must be granted management access to the Cisco Nexus 9000 Series Switch using AAA servers. The RADIUS servers are configured to accept login requests from the same Layer 2 subnet of the switch. The user must be permitted to log in with these requirements:

- * RADIUS server 1 must be used to log in via a console.
- * RADIUS server 2 must be used to log in via SSH.

Which two actions meet these requirements?

- A. Enable command authorization to RAD1 and RAD2 for all successful logins.
- B. Set the RADIUS source interface to be mgmt0 for group RAD1 and VLAN 22 for group RAD2.
- C. Configure the authentication login to use group RAD1 for console and group RAD2 for remote access.
- D. Change the dead timer for RAD1 and RAD2 to 1 minute.

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

* Setting the RADIUS source interface to be mgmt0 for group RAD1 and VLAN 22 for group RAD2 ensures that login requests from the console and SSH are sourced from the correct interfaces and reach the appropriate RADIUS server.

* Configuring the authentication login to use group RAD1 for console and group RAD2 for remote access (D) directs the switch to use the specified RADIUS server groups for the respective login methods, aligning with the user's requirements.

These configurations ensure that management access via console and SSH is authenticated through the designated RADIUS servers as intended. It's important to apply these settings correctly in the switch's configuration to achieve the desired access control.

NEW QUESTION # 45

Which storage solution allows multiple users to access files directly on a storage array over a LAN network?
