Nursing Neonatal Nurse Practitioner Exam Sample Questions (Q153-Q158):

NEW QUESTION # 153

Identifying and treating congenital hypothyroidism within the first month of life is especially critical to prevent

- A. respiratory abnormalities
- B. thyroid cancer
- C. intellectual disability

Answer: C

Explanation:

Untreated congenital hypothyroidism can result in profound intellectual disability, so diagnosing the disorder and beginning thyroxine treatment within the first month of life is essential. Newborn screening tests in most states mandate checking for hypothyroidism. Infants whose mothers received radioactive iodine treatment for thyroid cancer during pregnancy are especially at risk. Signs of congenital hypothyroidism include hypotonia, growth restriction, poor feeding, wide hands with stunted fingers, short extremities, edematous face, and thick protruding tongue.

NEW QUESTION # 154

What is a patent ductus arteriosus?

- A. A widening of the mitral valve resulting in mitral regurgitation
- B. An opening between the pulmonary and aortic arteries
- C. An opening in the septal wall between the left and right ventricles

Answer: B

Explanation:

PDA is an opening between the pulmonary and aortic arteries. Before a baby is born, its blood is oxygenated by the mother through the placenta. A vessel is formed connecting the pulmonary and aortic arteries, the ductus arteriosus. Shortly after birth, this vessel closes off so that the infant's blood can then receive oxygen from its own lungs. With a PDA the ductus arteriosus remains open and oxygen-rich blood from the aorta mixes with the blood lacking oxygen from the pulmonary artery. If the rest of the heart is functioning normal, the baby is monitored and the PDA is allowed to repair itself. If this does not happen, the defect can be surgically corrected.

NEW QUESTION # 155

On examining the neonate, the NP notes 9 café au lait spots with a diameter greater than 5 mm and freckles on the axilla and inguinal area

a. The infant should be tested for

- A. Addison's disease
- B. Sturge-Weber syndrome
- C. neurofibromatosis type 1

Answer: C

Explanation:

Café au lait spots (CAL) are flat skin lesions with increased melanin content and regular or irregular borders. If the CAL spots are faint, one can use a Wood lamp to make them easier to see.

Fewer than 3 café au lait spots have no clinical significance. However, 6 or more café au lait spots with a diameter larger than 5 mm occur in 95% of patients with neurofibromatosis type 1 (NFI), a disorder of chromosome 17. Lisch nodules on the child's iris and Crowe's sign (freckles on the axilla and inguinal area) corroborate the diagnosis of NFI.

NEW QUESTION # 156

Do more males or females develop Turner's syndrome?

- A. It affects females only
- B. It affects both genders equally

- C. It affects males only

Answer: A

Explanation:

Turner's syndrome affects females only. It occurs as a result of a genetic mutation in which the female receives only one X chromosome. This results in females who are short in stature, have delayed puberty, often suffer from infertility problems, and may have learning disabilities. In some cases, it may cause heart defects. Women who want to become pregnant will need to take hormone treatments, but are often unsuccessful at conceiving.

NEW QUESTION # 157

Transposition of the great vessels can involve the superior and inferior vena cava, the pulmonary artery and pulmonary veins, or the

- A. aorta
- B. tricuspid valve
- C. femoral artery and femoral vein

Answer: A

Explanation:

Transposition of the great vessels can involve any of the great vessels of the body: the superior or inferior vena cava, the pulmonary artery or pulmonary veins, or the aorta. It usually involves a "swap" between the locations of the vessels and can result in poorly oxygenated blood or poor delivery of blood to the body. If the pulmonary artery and aorta are involved, the condition is called a transposition of the great arteries.
