NEW QUESTION # 272

For developed markets, an increase in inequality between the richest and the poorest population of a country most likely results in:

- A. higher economic growth in skill-based industries
- B. greater reliance on family structures
- C. lower social mobility

Answer: C

Explanation:

In developed markets, an increase in inequality between the richest and the poorest population of a country most likely results in lower social mobility.

Lower social mobility (A): Increased inequality tends to create barriers to opportunities for the poorer segments of the population. This limits their ability to move up the socio-economic ladder, thereby reducing overall social mobility. Higher inequality often correlates with reduced access to quality education, healthcare, and other essential services, which are critical for social mobility. Greater reliance on family structures (B): While inequality might lead to some reliance on family structures, this is not the most direct or significant consequence compared to the impact on social mobility. Higher economic growth in skill-based industries (C): Inequality generally hampers inclusive economic growth and can exacerbate skill gaps, leading to reduced overall economic efficiency and growth.

For sovereign debt, the predominant approach to ESG investing is most likely:

- A. Screening

- C. Integration

Answer: C

- C. stewardship activities only.

Answer: A

Explanation:

ESG Integration:

NEW QUESTION # 276

Compared to traditional index-based funds, ESG index-based funds typically have:

- A. The same fee structure
- B. A higher fee structure
- C. A lower fee structure

Answer: B

Explanation:

ESG index-based funds generally have a higher fee structure than traditional index funds due to additional costs related to ESG data acquisition, portfolio screening, and research. Unlike conventional passive funds, ESG index funds require active decision-making to select securities based on sustainability criteria, which increases operational expenses.

Moreover, ESG indices often have lower liquidity and higher tracking error compared to traditional benchmarks, further contributing to cost differences.
