The candidates for the Microsoft DP-900 test will be measured in a variety of technical skill areas. These domains are divided into several topics. It is recommended that the applicants review the exam topics in detail and choose the appropriate study materials to prepare for the test. Below are the highlights of the objectives covered in this certification exam:

- Explain the Concepts of Core Data: 15-20%

  Within this subject area, the students should be able to explain different categories of core data workloads that are available. To answer questions from this subtopic, the examinees should be able to explain batch data and streaming data. They should also know the attributes of relational data and core differences between streaming and batch data. It also covers their skills in core concepts of data analytics. This requires an understanding of data visualization, basic chart types, analytics techniques, data processing concepts, as well as ETL & ELT processing.

- Explain Analytics Workloads on Azure: 25-30%

  This domain of the DP-900 exam measures one's knowledge of analytics workloads, data processing, and ingestion on Azure, as well as the elements of modern data warehouses. The candidates will also be tested on their understanding of data visualization within Microsoft Power BI. This involves describing the specific role of dashboards, paginated reporting, interactive reports, and workflows in Power BI.

- Explain how Relational Data Works on Azure: 25-30%

  The test takers will be required to have the ability to describe some concepts in this topic, including relational data workloads and relational Azure data services. They will also need to know how to identify the basic management functions for relational data. Additionally, they need to possess a good understanding of how to use the SQL language to describe the query methods for data.

- Explain how Non-Relational Data Works on Azure: 25-30%

  The questions from this section will evaluate the understanding of the candidates in non-relational data workloads as well as non-relational data contributions on Azure. They must be able to explain Azure File storage, Azure Cosmos DB APIs, Azure Blob Storage, and Azure Table storage. They should also be able to identify the foundational management tasks for non-relational data.

The Microsoft DP-900 Exam is a great starting point for those who are new to Azure and data analytics. It is also an opportunity for professionals who have been working with data and analytics for a while to validate their skills and knowledge. Microsoft Azure Data Fundamentals certification exam serves as a foundation for more advanced certifications, such as the Microsoft Certified: Azure Data Scientist Associate or the Microsoft Certified: Azure Data Engineer Associate. Ultimately, the Microsoft DP-900 exam is an excellent way to demonstrate proficiency in Azure data fundamentals and gain recognition in the industry.
