- A. Using the MC setup UI, review and apply the changes.
- B. No changes are necessary, the Monitoring Console has self-configuration capabilities.
- C. Remove and re-add the cluster master from the indexer clustering UI page to add new peers, then apply the changes under the MC setup UI.
- D. Each new indexer needs to be added using the distributed search UI, then settings must be saved under the MC setup UI.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 78

In a large cloud customer environment with many (>100) dynamically created endpoint systems, each with a UF already deployed, what is the best approach for associating these systems with an appropriate serverclass on the deployment server?

- A. Work with the cloud orchestration team to create a common host-naming convention for these systems so a simple pattern can be used in the serverclass.conf whitelist attribute.
- B. Using an installation bootstrap script run a CLI command to assign a clientName setting and permit serverclass.conf whitelist simplification.
- C. Work with the cloud orchestration team to dynamically insert an appropriate clientName setting into each endpoint's local/deploymentclient.conf which can be matched by whitelist in serverclass.conf.
- D. Create a CSV lookup file for each severclass, manually keep track of the endpoints within this CSV file, and leverage the whitelist.from_pathname attribute in serverclass.conf.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 79

Which of the following is a valid reason to implement a dedicated Monitoring Console search head instead of hosting the MC on the cluster/license master?

- A. The existing master node's resource usage or SmartStore configuration requires MC searches to run elsewhere to avoid impacting cluster operations.
- B. MC can only run on indexers.
- C. MC requires its own separate license.
- D. MC cannot run on any master node under any circumstances.

Answer: A

Explanation:

If the master node is heavily loaded, or SmartStore is in use (which requires MC to be dedicated), Splunk recommends hosting the Monitoring Console on a dedicated search head instead.
