VMware Advanced VMware Cloud Foundation 9.0 Operation Sample

Questions (Q32-Q37):

NEW QUESTION # 32

An administrator has been tasked explaining the benefits of the Business Intents within VCF Operations.

Drag and drop the three correct use cases from the Use Cases list on the left and place them into the Business Intent Use Cases list on the right in any order. (Choose three.)

Use Cases

- Meet compliance goals
- Group common OS and applications together
- Maximize capacity utilization
- Keep infrastructure cost per virtual machine as low as possible
- License enforcement

Business Intent Use Cases

Answer:

Explanation:

Use Cases

- Meet compliance goals
- Group common OS and applications together
- Maximize capacity utilization
- Keep infrastructure cost per virtual machine as low as possible
- License enforcement

Business Intent Use Cases

- Meet compliance goals
- Group common OS and applications together
- License enforcement

Explanation:

Business Intent in VCF Operations is used to define placement constraints that represent organizational, licensing, operational, or regulatory requirements. In Workload Optimization, Business Intent works with Operational Intent. Operational Intent determines how aggressively VCF Operations balances or consolidates workloads, while Business Intent defines where workloads are allowed or expected to run based on tag-driven placement rules. The Workload Optimization documentation states that the Business Intent card lets administrators define infrastructure zones within cluster boundaries and select criteria for VM placement; optimization then reports whether workloads are optimized and whether tag violations exist. Therefore, meeting compliance goals, grouping common operating systems and applications together, and license enforcement are valid Business Intent use cases because they are placement-policy objectives. Maximize capacity utilization is not Business Intent; it belongs to capacity optimization and Operational Intent, where VCF Operations balances, consolidates, or optimizes resource usage. Keeping infrastructure cost per VM as low as possible is a FinOps/cost-management goal, not a workload-placement constraint. Reference topic:

NEW QUESTION # 33

Which VCF Automation component serves as the underlying workflow engine, allowing administrators to run custom JavaScript or Python scripts to extend the platform's capabilities (e.g., updating a CMDB or IPAM system during a deployment)?

- A. VCF Automation Assembler.
- B. VCF Automation Orchestrator (formerly vRealize Orchestrator / vRO). It provides a library of plugins and a workflow design engine to execute custom logic and integrate with external systems via REST, SSH, PowerShell, etc.
- C. VCF Automation Service Broker.
- D. VCF Automation Config.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 34

In the VCF Automation "Infrastructure" tab, what is the fundamental difference between a Cloud Account and an Integration?

- A. Cloud Accounts are providers of Compute/Storage resources (e.g., vCenter, AWS) that form the "Zones". Integrations are services (e.g., IPAM, Active Directory, Ansible) that extend the capabilities or manage the properties of those resources.
- B. There is no difference; they are synonymous.
- C. Cloud Accounts cost money; Integrations are free.
- D. Cloud Accounts are for public cloud; Integrations are for private cloud.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 35

A customer estimates their log volume to be 45,000 Events Per Second (EPS).

According to standard sizing guidelines (where a "Medium" node handles ~15,000 EPS), what is the minimum cluster configuration required to handle this load without dropped packets?

- A. 1 Extra Large Node.
- B. 1 Large Node.
- C. 3 Medium Nodes (Active/Active/Active). This provides 45k EPS capacity (15k * 3), satisfying the requirement (though N+1 would suggest 4, 3 is the mathematical minimum for the throughput).
- D. 2 Medium Nodes (Active/Passive).

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 36

A security engineer constructs a query to detect "SQL Injection" attempts using a complex Regular Expression (Regex). They verify the regex works in the search bar.

What is the best way to reuse this regex logic in future queries and dashboards without retyping it every time?

- A. Create an Extracted Field. By saving the regex as a named Field (e.g., sql_query_string), the system parses it automatically. In the future, the engineer can simply drag and drop the sql_query_string field into filters or aggregations, treating it like a native property.
- B. Create a "Saved Search".
- C. Email the regex to the team.
- D. Save it as a text file on the desktop.

Answer: A
