Reliability and availability: RAIN, replication, and checkpoints

When traditional backup solutions fail, enterprises are exposed to windows of potential data loss. Avamar employs patented redundant array of independent nodes (RAIN) technology in order to provide high availability across the nodes in an Avamar server grid. Avamar can continue to provide reliable data protection and access, even if a server node fails or becomes unavailable, since data stored on any node can be reconstructed from the other nodes.

In addition to protecting enterprise systems, Avamar also protects itself with twice daily, internal checkpoints — consistent snapshots of the entire Avamar system that can be verified for integrity. If an integrity check fails due to an inconsistency, and the inconsistency cannot be fixed, the system can be quickly rolled back to a prior checkpoint. RAID protects data stored on disk and for further system protection flexibility, checkpoints can also be stored on a Data Domain System for implementations leveraging this integrated solution.
