Snowflake SnowPro Advanced: Data Analyst Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q37-Q42):

NEW QUESTION # 37

What types of Snowflake functions are available for data analysis and manipulation? (Select all that apply)

- A. System functions
- B. Aggregate functions
- C. Complex functions
- D. Scalar functions

Answer: A,B,D

Explanation:

Snowflake functions include scalar, aggregate, and system functions for data analysis and manipulation.

NEW QUESTION # 38

Which aspects are important when making predictions based on data for forecasting purposes? (Select all that apply)

- A. Relying solely on historical data without considering external factors
- B. Using only basic arithmetic functions for forecasting
- C. Considering trends and anomalies in historical data
- D. Incorporating statistical methods for accurate predictions

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

Incorporating statistical methods and considering trends and anomalies are crucial for accurate predictions in forecasting.

NEW QUESTION # 39

You are working with a Snowflake table 'ORDERS' that contains order data in a VARIANT column named 'ORDER DETAILS'. The 'ORDER DETAILS' column contains JSON objects with nested arrays of product information, including 'product_id', 'quantity', and 'price'. You need to calculate the total revenue for each order. Which of the following SQL snippets correctly calculates the total revenue for each order using LATERAL FLATTEN and aggregation?

- A. Option B
- B. Option C
- C. Option A
- D. Option E
- E. Option D

Answer: B,E

Explanation:

Snowflake requires explicit casting to numeric datatypes when performing arithmetic operations on VARIANT data. Options A and B do not cast the 'quantity' and 'price' fields to numbers, which would result in incorrect calculations. Option E uses a deprecated 'TO_NUMBER' function.

NEW QUESTION # 40

You have a requirement to load semi-structured JSON data from an internal stage into a Snowflake table. The JSON data contains nested arrays and objects. You need to flatten specific elements from these nested structures into separate columns in the target table during the load process. Assuming the internal stage is already configured, which of the following 'COPY INTO' statement snippets would correctly extract and load the 'city' from the 'address' object within the JSON, and the first element (index 0) of the 'phoneNumbers' array into corresponding columns in the target table?

- A. Option B
- B. Option E
- C. Option A
- D. Option C
- E. Option D

Answer: B

Explanation:

Option E is correct. It uses a SELECT statement within the 'COPY INTO' command to extract the desired nested elements. '$1' retrieves the 'city' value from the 'address' object and '$1' retrieves the first element of the 'phoneNumberS' array. explicitly casts the extracted values to VARCHAR. Option B is similar, but misses the explicit cast to VARCHAR. Without the cast, Snowflake may infer a different data type, leading to errors during load. Option A will fail because it relies on column name matching, which won't work for nested JSON elements. Options C and D have incorrect syntax for extracting nested elements within the COPY INTO command.

NEW QUESTION # 41

How does operationalizing data contribute to maintaining reports and dashboards for business requirements?

- A. Operationalizing data complicates dashboard sharing.
- B. It limits data accessibility for effective dashboard usage.
- C. It restricts data updates, affecting dashboard accuracy.
- D. Operationalizing data ensures consistent and efficient usage.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Operationalizing data ensures consistent and efficient usage of reports and dashboards.
