After logging into Prism Element, an administrator sees a red heart as shown in the exhibit. Which dashboard will help the administrator isolate the cause of the issue?

- A. Alerts
- B. Health
- C. Analysis
- D. Tasks

Answer: A

Explanation:

In Nutanix Prism Element, the red heart icon at the top-right of the UI indicates that there is a critical alert affecting the cluster's health. This icon is part of the Alert Monitoring System, and clicking on it redirects the user to the Alerts dashboard, where all current active alerts—including their severity, source, and recommended remediation steps—are listed.

What to do:

- * Navigate to the Alerts section.
- * Review all critical alerts for further diagnosis.
- * Cross-reference with the Health dashboard if deeper system component checks are needed.

Clarification of Other Options:

- * A. Health: Summarizes system component states but does not provide detailed alert causes.
- * B. Tasks: Tracks user-initiated jobs, unrelated to fault diagnosis.
- * D. Analysis: Used for performance metrics and trends, not fault alerts.

Prism UI Navigation Path:

Click the red heart icon # Alerts Dashboard

Official Reference:

When creating a new storage container, what is the default configuration for Compression?

- A. Inline
- B. Post-process (15 minutes)
- C. Disabled
- D. Post-process (60 minutes)

Explanation:

The correct answer is B. Disabled.

If no compression type is selected, the container remains uncompressed.

UI Navigation Path:

Clarifications:

* A (60 mins) and C (15 mins): Not standard default post-process intervals.
