NEW QUESTION # 105

Which option describes how risk should be managed in an agile project?

- A. The product owner is responsible for identifying risks and entering them into the backlog so that their mitigation can be prioritized.
- B. Since using an agile methodology minimizes risk in project management, the project team can focus on delivering business value over managing risk.
- C. Project team members would each be responsible for identifying and managing risks for the individual user stories they have been assigned.
- D. All stakeholders are responsible for identifying risks during standups, retrospectives, and other team meetings.

Answer: D

Explanation:

The correct answer is C - All stakeholders are responsible for identifying risks during standups, retrospectives, and other team meetings.

Agile promotes collective ownership. Risk identification and mitigation are shared responsibilities involving the entire team, including the product owner, developers, and other stakeholders. Agile meetings (e.g., stand-ups, retrospectives) are excellent forums for surfacing risks early.

PMI Agile Practice Guide:

"In agile projects, everyone is responsible for identifying and managing risk. Teams inspect frequently, enabling early detection and resolution of issues." (PMI Agile Practice Guide, Section 7.3 - Risk Management) Mike Griffiths:

"Risk management is embedded in agile events. Teams don't defer risk analysis to a specialist—they collaborate continuously to identify, discuss, and respond to risks." (PMI-ACP Exam Prep, Chapter 6 - Problem Detection and Resolution) Incorrect options:

* A ignores active risk management needs.

* B assumes individual rather than shared responsibility.

* D misrepresents the PO's role—risks may appear in the backlog, but management is team-based.

NEW QUESTION # 106

A member of a project's development team approaches the team lead and requests database administrator training. The team member believes that their inability to handle this work, and to rely on outside specialists, is impacting team velocity. What should the agile team lead do?

- A. Ask the outside specialists if database administration is required from the team
- B. Send the member to training
- C. Wait until all members of the team can attend training
- D. Send one member to training only after asking the team if there is an issue with the current workflow

Answer: B

Explanation:

The correct answer is A - Send the member to training. Agile encourages cross-functional teams and continuous improvement. When a team member identifies a skill gap that affects delivery, addressing it promptly through training or mentoring increases team capability and autonomy.

From the PMI Agile Practice Guide:

"Agile teams strive for cross-functionality. When skill gaps hinder progress, organizations support learning to reduce dependencies and improve throughput." (PMI Agile Practice Guide, Section 4.3 - Continuous Learning and Team Development) Mike Griffiths adds:

"Empowering team members through skill development enhances flexibility and velocity. Encouraging proactive learning improves team performance." (Mike Griffiths, PMI-ACP Exam Prep, Chapter 7 - Continuous Improvement) Incorrect options:

- * B defers ownership of the solution.
- * C unnecessarily delays action.
- * D delays learning due to unnecessary constraints.
