NEW QUESTION # 341

A deployment engineer has changed the Schedule Time Zone under the Settings menu. However, existing snapshot schedules continue to run at the previously configured time.

Why is this occurring?

- A. Existing snapshot schedules cannot be updated to the same absolute time.
- B. The Unity management server was not restarted before time zone changes took effect.
- C. The Unity system time is not set correctly and must be updated under system settings.
- D. Existing snapshot schedules are not updated to the same absolute time when the time zone is changed.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation

When the Schedule Time Zone is changed under the Settings menu, it only affects the display of the time zone and the creation of new snapshot schedules. Existing snapshot schedules are not automatically adjusted to the new time zone, and will continue to run at the same absolute time as before. For example, if a snapshot schedule was created to run every day at 10:00 AM in GMT+1, and the Schedule Time Zone was changed to GMT+2, the snapshot schedule will still run at 10:00 AM in GMT+1, which is 11:00 AM in GMT+2. To update the existing snapshot schedules to the new time zone, the administrator must edit each schedule manually and change the start time accordingly.
