What is the function of mirror neurons during infancy?

- A. to imitate the behaviors that infants see and observe in others
- B. to release growth hormones and enhance the infant's physical and motor skill development
- C. to enhance the infant's ability to think and pay attention

Answer: A

Explanation:

Mirror neurons are specialized brain cells that activate both when an individual performs an action and when they observe the same action performed by someone else. In infancy, mirror neurons are crucial for imitation, allowing infants to learn new behaviors and skills by watching others. - A. percentage of variance in one variable predictable from the other variable.
- B. percentage of error variance unique to each of the variables.
- C. maximum possible reliability coefficient for either measure.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The coefficient of determination is the square of the correlation coefficient (r^2) and represents the proportion of variance in one variable that can be predicted from the other variable. For example, an r of .50 yields an r^2 of .25, meaning 25% of the variance in one variable can be predicted from the other.
