NEW QUESTION # 26

Which BlueXP service scans your data to detect personally identifiable information (PII) across hybrid environments?

- A. Cloud Sync
- B. BlueXP Classification
- C. BlueXP Backup and Recovery
- D. Cloud Insights

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 27

A storage administrator is configuring a new 4-node AFF A400 ONTAP cluster. The cluster uses SnapMirror replication and provisions FlexCache origin volumes. The aggregates also use NetApp BlueXP tiering to object storage.

What is the minimum number of intercluster LIFs that are required on this cluster?

- A. 0
- B. 1
- C. 2
- D. 3

Answer: A

Explanation:

= Intercluster LIFs are logical interfaces that enable communication between clusters for data replication and caching. The minimum number of intercluster LIFs required on a cluster depends on the number of nodes, the number of IP Spaces, and the network topology.

According to the NetApp documentation, the following are the requirements for intercluster LIFs:

- At least one intercluster LIF must be configured on every node in the local cluster, and on every node in the remote cluster. Provisioning intercluster LIFs on only some nodes of the cluster is not supported.
- Each intercluster LIF requires an IP address dedicated for intercluster communication. The IP addresses assigned to intercluster LIFs can reside in the same subnet as data LIFs or in a different subnet.
- Every intercluster LIF on every node of the local cluster should be able to connect to every intercluster LIF on every node of the remote cluster. The cluster peering topology should use full-mesh connectivity. Full-mesh connectivity means that all the Intercluster LIFs of one peer cluster can communicate with all of the Intercluster LIFs of the other peer cluster.

Based on these requirements, the minimum number of intercluster LIFs required on a 4-node cluster is 8, assuming that there is only one IP Space and a full-mesh network topology. This means that each node has one intercluster LIF that can connect to the intercluster LIFs of the other nodes in the same cluster and the remote cluster. If there are more IP Spaces or a different network topology, the number of intercluster LIFs may vary.

- B. The destination volume has all of the storage efficiency settings disabled.
- C. The volume names on both the source and the destination are the same.
- D. The source volume has been taken offline.

Answer: A
