IIA Practice of Internal Auditing Sample Questions (Q146-Q151):

NEW QUESTION # 146

An internal auditor is preparing for an auditor of newly implemented software that is used by 3,000 employees in South America and Europe. What would be the best way for the auditor to gather relevant feedback?

- A. interview IT management in both regions
- B. Distribute surveys to software users in both regions
- C. Inspect regional user software training records
- D. Interview propel management and the vendor responsible for implementation

Answer: B

Explanation:

To gather relevant feedback on the newly implemented software used by 3,000 employees in South America and Europe, distributing surveys to the software users in both regions is the best approach. Surveys can reach a large number of users quickly and can provide comprehensive feedback on various aspects of the software, including usability, functionality, and user satisfaction. This method allows for the collection of a wide range of opinions and experiences, which can be analyzed to identify common issues and areas for improvement.

NEW QUESTION # 149

Which of the following statements is true regarding engagement planning?

- A. The main purpose of the engagement work program is to determine the nature and timing of procedures required to gather audit evidence.
- B. The scope of the engagement should be planned according to the internal audit activity's budget and then aligned to the risk universe.
- C. The planning phase of the engagement should be completed and approved before the fieldwork of the engagement begins.
- D. The audit engagement objectives should be based on operational management's view of risk objectives.

Answer: C

Explanation:

The planning phase is crucial for any audit engagement and must be completed and approved before starting fieldwork. This ensures that the engagement has a clear scope, objectives, and methodology, which are necessary for conducting an effective and efficient audit. Without proper planning, the audit team may miss critical areas or waste resources on low-priority risks.

IIA Reference:

IIA Standard 2200: Engagement Planning requires that internal auditors develop and document a plan for each engagement, including the engagement's objectives, scope, timing, and resource allocations, before starting fieldwork.

The Practice Guide on Planning emphasizes that completing and approving the planning phase ensures that all necessary preparations are made, and potential risks are identified and mitigated before fieldwork begins.
