Salesforce Certified Identity and Access Management Architect Sample Questions (Q95-Q100):

NEW QUESTION # 95

How should an identity architect automate provisioning and deprovisioning of users into Salesforce from an external system?

- A. Call OpenID Connect (OIDC)-userinfo endpoint with a valid access token.
- B. Use Security Assertion Markup Language Just-in-Time (SAML JIT) on incoming SAML assertions.
- C. Call SOAP API upsertQ on user object.
- D. Run registration handler on incoming OAuth responses.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 96

Northern Trail Outfitters (NTO) wants to give customers the ability to submit and manage issues with their purchases. It is important for NTO to give its customers the ability to login with their Facebook and Twitter credentials.

What should an identity architect recommend to meet these requirements?

- A. obtain login icon for Facebook and Twitter.
- B. create a custom external authentication provider for Twitter.
- C. configure a predefined authentication provider for Facebook and Twitter.
- D. create a custom external authentication provider for Facebook.

Answer: C

Explanation:

When Salesforce already provides built-in authentication provider support for the social networks required by the business, the simplest architecture is to use those predefined authentication providers. That avoids building custom provider logic for well-known services such as Facebook and, in many exam scenarios, Twitter. The point of the predefined provider is to reduce custom work, accelerate setup, and stay within the Salesforce-supported social sign-in pattern. A custom provider would only be necessary when the external source is not supported through the standard templates or protocols available. The architecture principle is to use standard provider support first and reserve custom provider work for gaps. That keeps the implementation easier to manage and easier to troubleshoot. This is why option C is the best answer in Salesforce terms.

NEW QUESTION # 97

A technology enterprise is setting up an identity solution with an external vendors wellness application for its employees. The user attributes need to be returned to the wellness application in an ID token.

Which authentication mechanism should an identity architect recommend to meet the requirements?

- A. JWT Bearer Token Flow
- B. Web Server Flow
- C. OpenID Connect
- D. User Agent Flow

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

OpenID Connect is an authentication protocol that allows a service provider to obtain user attributes in an ID token from an IdP. The other flows are OAuth 2.0 flows that are used for authorization, not authentication.

NEW QUESTION # 98

An identity architect is setting up an integration between Salesforce and a third-party system. The third-party system needs to be able to authenticate to Salesforce and then make API calls against the REST API.

One of the requirements is that the solution needs to ensure the third party service providers connected app in Salesforce minimizes the need for end user interaction and maximizes security.

Which OAuth flow should be used to fulfill the requirement?

- A. Web Server Flow
- B. Username-Password Flow
- C. JWT Bearer Flow
- D. User Agent Flow

Answer: C

Explanation:

For a server-to-server integration that should avoid end-user interaction and maximize security, the JWT Bearer Flow is the strongest fit. Salesforce documents it for noninteractive scenarios where a trusted external service can sign an assertion with a certificate and exchange it for an access token. That means no browser-based approval screen, no password collection, and no dependence on a human being present to authorize the session. Web Server and User-Agent flows are designed for interactive delegated access, while username-password is a special-case pattern with weaker security characteristics. The architectural takeaway is simple:

when the client is a trusted server and the goal is high assurance with minimal user involvement, certificate-based JWT exchange is the preferred Salesforce approach. This is why option A is the best answer in Salesforce terms.

NEW QUESTION # 99

A global company is using the Salesforce Platform as an Identity Provider and needs to integrate a third-party application with its Experience Cloud customer portal.

Which two features should be utilized to provide users with login and identity services for the third-party application?

Choose 2 answers

- A. External Data source with Named Principal identity type.
- B. Use the App Launcher with single sign-on (SSO).
- C. Use Delegated Authentication.
- D. Use a connected app.

Answer: B,D

Explanation:

Using the App Launcher with SSO and using a connected app are two features that can be utilized to provide users with login and identity services for the third-party application. The App Launcher allows users to access multiple apps from one location with SSO. The connected app allows users to authorize access to the third-party application using OAuth 2.0. The other options are either not relevant or not applicable for this use case.
