NEW QUESTION # 787

The PMHNP is providing psychoeducation for a patient newly diagnosed with schizophrenia. What is the primary purpose of psychoeducation for this patient?

- A. To provide medication management services
- B. To teach the patient coping skills for managing their symptoms
- C. To provide family therapy services
- D. To teach the patient about their diagnosis and symptoms

Answer: D

Explanation:

Psychoeducation is a type of treatment that involves teaching patients and their families about a particular mental health condition, including its symptoms, causes, and treatment options. For a patient newly diagnosed with schizophrenia, psychoeducation serves as a critical tool in helping them understand their illness and providing them with information on how to manage their symptoms.

The patient can learn about the importance of medication adherence, the potential side effects of medication, and the importance of regular follow-up appointments with their healthcare provider. This knowledge can help the patient make informed decisions about their treatment and reduce the risk of relapse. Coping skills and family therapy may be part of the patient's overall treatment plan, but they are not the primary purpose of psychoeducation.
