Microsoft Security, Compliance, and Identity Fundamentals Sample Questions (Q68-Q73):

NEW QUESTION # 68

Select the answer that correctly completes the sentence.

☐

Answer:

Explanation:

☐

Explanation:

In Microsoft cloud identity, access to Azure resources follows the classical order of authenticate, then authorize. Microsoft Learn defines the two steps clearly: "Authentication is the process of establishing the identity of a person or service," while "Authorization is the process of determining what a person or service can do." In an Azure sign-in, Microsoft Entra ID (formerly Azure AD) first validates the user's credentials (password, MFA, Conditional Access, device compliance, risk evaluation). Upon success, a security token is issued that proves the user's identity. Only after this identity is established does Azure proceed to authorization, where the Azure Resource Manager evaluates role-based access control (RBAC) assignments to decide what actions are allowed. SCI guidance emphasizes this sequence for Zero Trust: "Verify explicitly" (authenticate with strong signals) and then "use least privilege access" (authorize by RBAC or Privileged Identity Management). Therefore, when users sign in to the Azure portal, the first step is authentication- verifying who they are. The subsequent step is authorization, which determines what resources and operations they can access based on roles, scope, and policy. This ordering underpins secure identity and access management across Microsoft 365 and Azure.

NEW QUESTION # 69

Select the answer that correctly completes the sentence.

☐

Answer:

Explanation:

☐

Explanation:

In Microsoft's security portfolio, Microsoft Defender for Cloud is the service that provides cloud workload protection for Azure and hybrid cloud resources. Microsoft describes it as a "cloud-native application protection platform (CNAPP) that helps strengthen the security posture of your cloud resources and protect workloads across multicloud and hybrid environments." The service delivers Cloud Security Posture Management (CSPM) and Cloud Workload Protection (CWP) by continuously assessing configurations and protecting workloads such as virtual machines, containers, databases, and storage. Documentation further states that Defender for Cloud "provides threat protection for workloads running in Azure, on-premises, and in other clouds," giving a single pane to harden resources, detect active threats, and remediate.

By contrast, Azure Monitor focuses on telemetry and observability; the Microsoft cloud security benchmark is a set of prescriptive best practices; and Microsoft Secure Score is an aggregate metric reflecting security posture. None of those deliver the workload protection and active defense capabilities (e.g., recommendations, hardening, and threat detection for servers, containers, and PaaS services) that Defender for Cloud offers.

Therefore, the sentence correctly completes as: Microsoft Defender for Cloud provides cloud workload protection for Azure and hybrid cloud resources.

Microsoft defines Microsoft Entra ID (formerly Azure Active Directory) as "a cloud-based identity and access management (IAM) service" that "helps your employees sign in and access resources." In SCI learning paths, Entra ID is positioned as the tenant's identity provider (IdP) that authenticates users and issues tokens for applications using standards such as OpenID Connect, OAuth 2.0, and SAML, which applications then use to authorize access based on roles/claims. Microsoft further explains that Entra ID provides single sign-on, Conditional Access, MFA, and token-based authorization—all core IdP capabilities that govern who can access what across Microsoft 365, Azure, and thousands of SaaS apps.

By contrast, an extended detection and response (XDR) system refers to Microsoft Defender XDR, which focuses on incident detection, correlation, and response—not identity provisioning or token issuance. A security information and event management (SIEM) system refers to Microsoft Sentinel, which aggregates and analyzes logs and alerts—not primary authentication. An Azure management group is a governance scope used to organize subscriptions and apply policy/RBAC at scale; it is not an authentication/authorization service. Therefore, within Microsoft's SCI scope, Microsoft Entra ID is an identity provider used to perform authentication (verifying identity and issuing tokens) and to enable authorization in applications and resources that consume those tokens.
