Scrum Professional Scrum Product Owner I Sample Questions (Q118-Q123):

NEW QUESTION # 118

True or False: The Sprint Backlog is a result of Sprint Planning, and it includes the Sprint Goal.

- A. True
- B. False

Answer: A

Explanation:

It is true that the Sprint Backlog is a result of Sprint Planning, and it includes the Sprint Goal. This is because:

Sprint Planning is an event where the Scrum Team plans for the upcoming Sprint. The purpose of Sprint Planning is to align the entire Scrum Team around a common goal and a plan for delivering an Increment that meets that goal.

The Sprint Backlog is the set of Product Backlog items selected for the Sprint, plus a plan for delivering them as a "Done" Increment. The Sprint Backlog is owned by the Developers who use it to organize and manage their work during the Sprint.

The Sprint Goal is a short-term objective that provides guidance and focus to the Scrum Team throughout the Sprint. It is a flexible and negotiable commitment that can be adjusted as more is learned throughout the Sprint.

The Sprint Backlog is created by the collaborative work of the entire Scrum Team during Sprint Planning. The Product Owner proposes how the product could increase its value and utility in the current Sprint. The Developers discuss how they can deliver a "Done" Increment that meets this proposal. Together, they define a Sprint Goal that summarizes why the Sprint is valuable to stakeholders. Then, they select enough Product Backlog items from the top of the ordered Product Backlog to satisfy the Sprint Goal. Finally, they create a plan for how they will deliver those items as a "Done" Increment.

NEW QUESTION # 119

Scrum requires that the Product Owner must use which of the following items?

(choose all that apply)

- A. None of the above.
- B. Project Gantt chart.
- C. Critical Path Analysis.
- D. Feature burn-up.
- E. Burndown chart.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

Scrum does not require that the Product Owner must use any of the following items:

* Burndown chart: A burndown chart is a graphical representation of work left to do versus time. It can be used to track progress and forecast completion dates of projects or Sprints. However, it is not mandatory or prescribed in Scrum. It is one of the possible techniques that a Product Owner may use to monitor and communicate product development.

* Feature burn-up: A feature burn-up chart is a graphical representation of features completed versus time.

It can be used to track progress and forecast scope changes of projects or Sprints. However, it is not mandatory or prescribed in Scrum. It is one of the possible techniques that a Product Owner may use to monitor and communicate product development.

* Critical Path Analysis: Critical Path Analysis is a project management technique that identifies the sequence of tasks that must be completed on time for a project or Sprint to finish on schedule. It can be used to plan, monitor, and control complex projects or Sprints. However, it is not mandatory or prescribed in Scrum. It is one of the possible techniques that a Product Owner may use to manage product development.

* Project Gantt chart: A project Gantt chart is a graphical representation of tasks, dependencies, durations, and milestones of a project or Sprint. It can be used to plan, monitor, and control complex projects or Sprints. However, it is not mandatory or prescribed in Scrum. It is one of the possible techniques that a Product Owner may use to manage product development. Therefore, the correct answer is none of the above.

NEW QUESTION # 120

Why are smaller teams better, following Scrum?

- A. Smaller teams communicate better and are more productive.
- B. The controlling for smaller teams is much easier.
- C. Smaller teams are more creative.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 121

Why are Sprints fixed length events of one month or less?

- A. To create consistency.
- B. The Sprint Goal could become invalid.
- C. Sprints should not have a fixed length.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 122

Which of the following are true about the length of the Sprint?

(choose the best answer)

- A. The length of the Sprint should be proportional to the work that is done in between Sprints.
- B. All Sprints must be one month or less.
- C. Sprint length is determined during Sprint Planning, and should be long enough to make sure the Scrum Team can deliver what is to be accomplished in the upcoming Sprint
- D. Sprint length is determined during Sprint Planning, and should hold the time it will take to build the planned features in the upcoming Sprint, but does not include time for any testing.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The Scrum Guide states that "Sprints are the heart of Scrum where ideas are turned into value". It also states that "Sprints have consistent durations throughout a development effort. A new Sprint starts immediately after the conclusion of the previous Sprint". Furthermore, it states that "Sprints are limited to one calendar month.

When a Sprint's horizon is too long the definition of what is being built may change, complexity may rise, and risk may increase".

Therefore, the correct answer is B. The other options are not acceptable, as they contradict the Scrum principles of empiricism, self-organization, and adaptation.
