NEW QUESTION # 89

United Telecom (UT) has finalized a design for launching sales and self-service capabilities through different channels to improve their customer experience.

Which two out-of-the-box capabilities should UT use to support customers through multiple channels on Communications Cloud?

- A. Custom APIs using LightningOut
- B. Cart-based APIs using OmniOut
- C. Digital Commerce APIs
- D. Digital Commerce SDK

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

Salesforce Communications Cloud (formerly Vlocity Communications) provides a set of out-of-the-box omnichannel capabilities specifically designed to support buying, managing, and modifying telecom services across web, mobile, partner portals, and agent-assisted channels. Public Salesforce documentation describes two major components that enable this: Digital Commerce APIs and the Digital Commerce SDK.

Digital Commerce APIs (Option A)

Salesforce provides a full suite of REST-based Digital Commerce APIs that expose CPQ functions such as:

Product discovery

Product configuration

Pricing and promotions

Cart creation and management

Order submission

These APIs are channel-agnostic and built for web portals, mobile apps, in-store kiosks, and agent desktops, making them ideal for United Telecom's requirement to support multiple sales and self-service channels. They leverage standardized product and pricing logic directly from the Enterprise Product Catalog, ensuring consistency across all channels.

Digital Commerce SDK (Option B)

The Digital Commerce SDK complements the APIs by providing reusable UI components, templates, and client-side tools to rapidly build modern commerce experiences. It supports Lightning, LWC, and headless storefronts, enabling companies to create branded, high-performing customer experiences with minimal custom code. This SDK allows UT to deliver responsive and consistent digital buying flows without building UI logic from scratch.

Options C (Cart-based APIs using OmniOut) and D (Custom APIs using LightningOut) involve custom or integration-heavy approaches that are not needed when out-of-the-box Digital Commerce capabilities already provide a complete omnichannel solution.

Therefore, the two correct out-of-the-box capabilities for multi-channel customer experience in Communications Cloud are A and B.

NEW QUESTION # 90

Universal Containers (UC) is a Communications Service Provider using Communications Cloud. UC markets their DSL Internet service with two speed tiers - 5 Mbps and 50 Mbps. Five Mbps uses the ADSL technology, which requires Copper Pair, and 50 Mbps uses the VDSL technology, which requires Bonded Copper Pair.

How should a Consultant model this service end-to-end?

- A. Model the DSL Internet Service as a commercial product, 5 Mbps and 50 Mbps as fields of that product, ADSL and VDSL as a Customer Facing Service (CFS), and Copper Pair and Bonded Copper Pair as a Resource Facing Service (RFS). Model multi-level decomposition between the commercial product to CFS to RFS.
- B. Model the DSL Internet service as a technical product, 5 Mbps and 50 Mbps as attributes of that product, ADSL and VDSL as a Customer Facing Service (CFS), and Copper Pair and Bonded Copper Pair as a Resource Facing Service (RFS). Model multi-level decomposition between the technical product to CFS to RFS.
- C. Model the DSL Internet service as a commercial product, 5 Mbps and 50 Mbps as attributes of that product, ADSL and VDSL as a Customer Facing Service (CFS), and Copper Pair and Bonded Copper Pair as a Resource Facing Service (RFS). Model multi-level decomposition between the commercial product to CFS to RFS.
- D. Model the DSL Internet Service as a commercial product, 5 Mbps and 50 Mbps as attributes of that product, ADSL and VDSL and Copper Pair and Bonded Copper Pair as technical products. Model direct decomposition between the technical product to technical products.

Answer: C

Explanation:

In Communications Cloud, the correct end-to-end modeling pattern is:

Commercial Product → DSL Internet

Attributes → Speed (5 Mbps, 50 Mbps) and derived Technology (ADSL, VDSL) Customer Facing Services (CFS): ADSL CFS, VDSL CFS Resource Facing Services (RFS): Copper Pair, Bonded Copper Pair Multi-level decomposition: Commercial → CFS → RFS This follows the standard Salesforce service modeling approach where CFS represents logical service layers, and RFS represents physical resources required to deliver the service.
