Which field in a DNS Request event points to the responsible process?

- A. ParentProcessId_decimal
- B. TargetProcessId_decimal
- C. ContextProcessId_decimal
- D. ContextProcessId_readable

Answer: D

Explanation:

The ContextProcessId_readable field in a DNS Request event points to the responsible process. The ContextProcessId_readable field is the readable representation of the process identifier for the process that initiated the DNS request. It can be used to identify which process was communicating with a specific domain or IP address. The TargetProcessId_decimal, ContextProcessId_decimal, and ParentProcessId_decimal fields do not point to the responsible process.

- A. Discovering internet-facing servers
- B. Emailing the intended victim with a malware attachment
- C. Installing a backdoor on the victim endpoint
- D. Loading a malicious payload into a common DLL

Answer: A

Discovering internet-facing servers is an example of actor actions during the RECONNAISSANCE phase of the Cyber Kill Chain. Discovering internet-facing servers is a way for the adversary to find potential entry points or weaknesses in the target network.

NEW QUESTION # 41

With Custom Alerts you are able to configure email alerts using predefined templates so you're notified about specific activity in your environment. Which of the following outlines the steps required to properly create a custom alert rule?

- A. Create the query for the alert, setup the email template for the alert, and then set the schedule for the alert
- B. Choose the template you would like to configure, setup how often you would like the alert to run, and then schedule the alert
- C. Create a new custom template, configure the email template, and then create the custom query for the alert
- D. Choose the template you would like to configure, preview the search results, and then schedule the alert

Answer: D

Explanation:

These are the steps required to properly create a custom alert rule. Custom Alerts are a feature that allows you to configure email alerts using predefined templates so you're notified about specific activity in your environment. You can choose from various templates that cover different use cases, such as suspicious PowerShell activity, network connections to risky countries, etc. You can also preview the search results of the template before scheduling the alert. You do not need to create the query for the alert, setup the email template for the alert, or create a new custom template, as these are already provided by the predefined templates.

NEW QUESTION # 42

How do you rename fields while using transforming commands such as table, chart, and stats?

- A. You cannot rename fields as it would affect sub-queries and statistical analysis
- B. By using the "renamed" keyword after the field name eg "stats count renamed totalcount by ComputerName"
- C. By specifying the desired name after the field name eg "stats count totalcount by ComputerName"
- D. By renaming the fields with the "rename" command after the transforming command e.g. "stats count by ComputerName | rename count AS total_count"

Answer: D

Explanation:

The rename command is used to rename fields while using transforming commands such as table, chart, and stats. It can be used after the transforming command and specify the old and new field names with the AS keyword. You can rename fields as it would not affect sub-queries and statistical analysis, as long as you use the correct field names in your queries. The renamed keyword and the desired name after the field name are not valid ways to rename fields.

NEW QUESTION # 43

Which of the following is a suspicious process behavior?

- A. PowerShell running an execution policy of RemoteSigned
- B. Non-network processes (eg, notepad.exe) making an outbound network connection
- C. PowerShell launching a PowerShell script
- D. An Internet browser (eg, Internet Explorer) performing multiple DNS requests

Answer: B

Explanation:

Non-network processes are processes that are not expected to communicate over the network, such as notepad.exe. If they make an outbound network connection, it could indicate that they are compromised or maliciously used by an adversary. PowerShell running an execution policy of RemoteSigned is a default setting that allows local scripts to run without digital signatures. An Internet browser performing multiple DNS requests is a normal behavior for web browsing. PowerShell launching a PowerShell script is also a common behavior for legitimate tasks.
