Salesforce Certified Slack Developer Sample Questions (Q212-Q217):

NEW QUESTION # 212

You are designing a Slack app that needs to programmatically send messages to various channels and users. Which API is best suited for this purpose?

- A. Events API
- B. Slash Commands
- C. Web API using `chat.postMessage`
- D. RTM (Real-Time Messaging) API

Answer: C

Explanation:

Web API using `chat.postMessage` The Web API, specifically the `chat.postMessage` method, is the best choice for sending programmatically generated messages to channels and users. It allows for flexible and direct message sending capabilities.

Why not the other options:

- *The Events API is designed for receiving and responding to events within Slack, not for initiating message sending.
- *The RTM API, while capable of sending messages, is a legacy method and less efficient compared to the Web API's `chat.postMessage` method.
- *Slash Commands are for creating interactive commands that users can execute in Slack; they are not for sending automated messages.

NEW QUESTION # 213

You are creating a Slack app for project management.

To align with Slack's principles of a pleasant and productive work environment, how should your app present project updates and notifications?

- A. Use pop-up windows within Slack for real-time updates on every project change
- B. Aggregate key updates and present them in a weekly digest format in a designated channel
- C. Send individual direct messages to each team member with daily updates
- D. Display comprehensive project updates every hour in the main channel

Answer: B

Explanation:

Aggregate key updates and present them in a weekly digest format in a designated channel Aggregating key updates and presenting them in a weekly digest in a designated channel balances the need for information with avoiding constant interruptions, thus maintaining a more pleasant and productive work environment.

Why not the other options:

- *Providing comprehensive updates every hour can overwhelm users and clutter the main channel, disrupting productivity.
- *Sending individual direct messages with daily updates can be intrusive and overwhelming for each team member.
- *Using pop-up windows for real-time updates on every project change can be distracting and impede work flow.

NEW QUESTION # 214

In the context of an Enterprise Grid in Slack, what role is required to generate a token for using APIs to automate organizational-wide administration?

- A. Users with the Enterprise Grid Admin role
- B. Individual workspace admins within the Grid
- C. Any user within the organization's Slack Grid
- D. External IT support personnel with limited Slack access

Answer: A

Explanation:

Users with the Enterprise Grid Admin role For organizational-wide administration in an Enterprise Grid, generating a token for using APIs typically requires a user to have the Enterprise Grid Admin role. This role is equipped with the necessary permissions to handle administrative tasks and API integrations across the entire Grid.

Why not the other options:

- *Not all users within the organization will have the necessary permissions for this level of administrative control.
- *Individual workspace admins might not have permissions for organization-wide tasks in the Enterprise Grid.
- *External IT support personnel typically do not have the level of access required for generating such tokens.

NEW QUESTION # 215

What is an essential security measure to implement when handling the redirect URI in the Slack app's OAuth flow?

- A. Redirect users to a third-party authentication service after receiving the OAuth token
- B. Utilize a publicly accessible redirect URI to ensure easy access
- C. Ensure the redirect URI uses HTTPS to secure the data transmission
- D. Append the OAuth access token to the redirect URI for transparency

Answer: C

Explanation:

Ensure the redirect URI uses HTTPS to secure the data transmission Ensuring that the redirect URI uses HTTPS is vital for securing the data transmission during the OAuth flow. This encrypted connection helps protect the integrity and confidentiality of the data exchanged, including any sensitive tokens.

Why not the other options:

- *Using a publicly accessible redirect URI can pose security risks, as it may be easily accessible by unauthorized entities.
- *Appending the OAuth access token to the redirect URI can lead to exposure and potential misuse of the token.
- *Redirecting users to a third-party authentication service after receiving the OAuth token can complicate the flow and introduce additional security risks.

NEW QUESTION # 216

Your Slack app is designed to facilitate team collaboration on projects.

To align with Slack's user experience goals, what functionality should your app prioritize?

- A. Frequent automated direct messages to team members asking for project updates
- B. Creation of a collaborative workspace within Slack where team members can share updates and files related to the project
- C. Automatic posting of team member activity logs in the general channel every two hours
- D. Mandatory end-of-day reports from each team member, posted in a designated Slack channel

Answer: B

Explanation:

Creation of a collaborative workspace within Slack where team members can share updates and files related to the project Creating a collaborative workspace within Slack for sharing updates and files fosters a productive environment for team collaboration. This approach aligns with Slack's commitment to making work life more organized and efficient, offering a centralized space for project-related communication.

Why not the other options:

- *Frequent automatic postings can clutter the general channel and may not effectively communicate meaningful project progress.
- *Mandatory reports can become a repetitive task that doesn't necessarily contribute to a positive user experience or effective collaboration.
- *Frequent automated direct messages can be perceived as intrusive and might interrupt the workflow, which goes against Slack's principle of a pleasant work environment.
