EC-COUNCIL EC Council Certified Incident Handler (ECIH v3) Sample Questions (Q250-Q255):

NEW QUESTION # 250

After a recent email attack, Harry is analyzing the incident to obtain important information related to the incident. While investigating the incident, he is trying to extract information such as sender identity, mail server, sender's IP address, location, and so on. Which of the following tools Harry must use to perform this task?

- A. Sharp
- B. Clamwin
- C. Yesware
- D. Loggly

Answer: C

Explanation:

Yesware is a tool primarily known for its email tracking capabilities, which can be useful for sales, marketing, and customer relationship management. However, in the context of investigating email attacks and analyzing incidents to extract details such as sender identity, mail server, sender's IP address, and location, a more appropriate tool would be one that specializes in analyzing and extracting detailed header information from emails, providing insights into the path an email took across the internet. While Yesware can provide data related to email interactions, it might not offer the depth of forensic analysis required for incident investigation. Tools like email header analyzers, which are designed specifically for dissecting and interpreting email headers, would be more fitting. In the absence of a direct match from the given options, the description might imply a broader interpretation of tools like Yesware in context but traditionally, tools specifically designed for email forensics would be sought after for this task.

References: Understanding email headers and using tools to analyze them is an important part of email incident response, as discussed in cybersecurity training programs like ECIH v3 by EC-Council, which covers the methodologies for analyzing various types of cybersecurity incidents, including email-based threats.

Michael is an incident handler at CyberTech Solutions. He is performing detection and analysis of a cloud security incident. He is analyzing the file systems, slack spaces, and metadata of the storage units to find hidden malware and evidence of malice.

Identify the cloud security incident handled by Michael.

- A. Application-related incident
- B. Network-related incident
- C. Storage-related incident
- D. Server-related incident

Answer: C

Explanation:

Michael's activities, which involve analyzing file systems, slack spaces, and metadata of storage units to find hidden malware and evidence of malice, indicate that he is handling a storage-related cloud security incident.

This type of incident pertains to unauthorized access, alteration, or exfiltration of data stored in cloud environments. By focusing on the storage aspects such as file systems and metadata, Michael is looking for signs of compromise that specifically affect the storage of data, which is indicative of a storage-related security incident in the cloud.
