NEW QUESTION # 40
Which three building blocks are used to create a Flow?

- A. Resources
- B. Screens
- C. Process
- D. Connectors
- E. Elements

Answer: A,D,E

Explanation:
There are 3 main "building blocks" of any Flow:
1. Elements are the individual building blocks of the Flow. These perform logical actions such as assignments, decisions, or loops. There are also data elements that will query the database or commit record changes.
2. Connectors determine which element leads to which. Winter '21 enables Auto-Layout, and connects the Elements together automatically.
3. Resources are the individual variables of data that are to be used in a Flow - these can be strings of text, numbers, records, formulae, or collections.
