Preparing for the Cisco 200-901: DevNet Associate exam requires dedication, hard work, and a commitment to learning. Candidates should have a solid understanding of software development principles, programming languages, networking concepts, and automation tools. They should also have hands-on experience working with Cisco platforms and tools.

Cisco 200-901 Exam: Details and Features

The Cisco 200-901 test lasts for 2 hours and can be taken either in English or Japanese. You will receive access to scheduling your exam after paying the enrollment fee of $300. The exact number of questions in this certification test and their formats are unknown before the date of the real exam. Cisco also doesn't reveal the passing scores for its tests as they are subject to change without notice.

Since very little is known about the 200-901 Exam Pattern, it is crucially important that you prepare for it thoroughly and cover all the topics beforehand. The best way to fulfill that task is to enroll for the official course "Developing Applications and Automating Workflows using Cisco Platforms (DEVASC)" available on the certification webpage.

Once you obtain your certificate, it will be valid for 3 years. After this period, you must recertify to maintain your status. You can do that by taking the latest release of your certification exam, completing various education activities offered by Cisco, or a combination of both.

□ Which device limits traffic between server 1 and server 2?

- A. Device E
- B. Device B
- C. Device D
- D. Device C

Answer: A

Explanation:

In the provided network topology, Device E is positioned between Server 1 and Server 2. Device E, being a Layer 2 switch, will limit traffic between these servers by making forwarding decisions based on MAC addresses. If there are VLANs configured, Device E will ensure that traffic is segregated accordingly, allowing only specific traffic to pass between the servers as defined by the network policies.
