Medical Technology AMCA Phlebotomy Technician Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q91-Q96):

NEW QUESTION # 91

When delivering a blood specimen that requires STAT testing to the laboratory, the phlebotomist must:

- A. Place it in a STAT rack
- B. Ensure that the specimen is marked as STAT.
- C. Assume that the testing personnel are aware of the STAT request.
- D. Notify the testing personnel of the STAT request and receive verbal acknowledgement

Answer: D

Explanation:

When delivering a blood specimen that requires STAT (immediate) testing to the laboratory, the phlebotomist must notify the testing personnel and receive verbal acknowledgement of a STAT specimen. Even if a STAT rack is available, simply placing the specimen in the rack is not sufficient because personnel who are busily engaged in testing may not notice that a specimen has been placed in the rack, resulting in delays in getting the test results.

NEW QUESTION # 92

If a patient is heavily tattooed on both arms, from shoulders to wrists with no areas left open, the most appropriate site for venipuncture is:

- A. Any site
- B. An area without solid dye
- C. The antecubital area with the oldest tattoos
- D. The dorsal metacarpal veins

Answer: D

Explanation:

If a patient is heavily tattooed on both arms, from shoulders to wrists with no areas left open, the most appropriate site for venipuncture is the dorsal metacarpal veins. Tattooed areas should be avoided if possible because they may harbor infection (if done recently) and may mask signs of inflammation or bruising. If it is necessary to draw blood from a tattooed area, it is important to try to find an area that is open and free of dye, especially solid-dyed areas.

NEW QUESTION # 93

Which pattern of antecubital veins is predominant in most populations?

- A. An atypical pattern
- B. The Y pattern
- C. The M pattern
- D. The H pattern

Answer: D

Explanation:

The pattern of antecubital veins that is predominant in most populations is the H pattern, also known as the N pattern. The veins that are most prominent in the H pattern include the cephalic, median cubital, and basilic veins. The veins that are most prominent in the M pattern, also known as the Y pattern, include the cephalic, median cephalic, median basilic, and basilic veins. Although these tv.ro patterns are the most common, some patients have atypical patterns of veins rather than the H or M configuration.

NEW QUESTION # 94

When using an evacuated tube system for venipuncture, the phlebotomist can determine that a tube is properly filled when the:

- A. Volume fills the tube completely.
- B. Volume appears adequate on examination.
- C. Vacuum is exhausted.
- D. Volume fills to the "full" line.

Answer: C

Explanation:

When using an evacuated tube system for venipuncture, the phlebotomist can determine that a tube is properly filled when the vacuum is exhausted. Each type of tube has a vacuum that will provide the volume necessary for getting the correct ratio of blood to the tube additive (if any) and the tests that may be run on the sample. Typical volumes are 2.0-8.5 mL. The tube should also be examined after filling to ensure that it appears to contain the correct volume.

NEW QUESTION # 95

If a tourniquet has been in place for 60 seconds and is released, what period of time is required before the tourniquet can be reapplied?

- A. 90 seconds
- B. 60 seconds
- C. 2 minutes
- D. 30 seconds

Answer: C

Explanation:

If a tourniquet has been in place for 60 seconds and is released, the period of time that is required before the tourniquet can be reapplied is 2 minutes. Tourniquets should be placed immediately proximal to the site being palpated and must not be left in place for longer than 60 seconds. Latex tourniquets should be avoided because they increase the risk of latex sensitivity and allergic reactions. Single-use tourniquets are recommended to reduce the risk of spreading methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus infections.
